JAMES NEILL.

THE MATINEE GIRL

"GIVE my regards to old Broadway" sings that bright brat, Georgie Cohan, in Little Johnny Jones, the youthful but lively musical play of which he wrote libretto, lyrics and music, and in which he is starring, besides providing his wife and father and mother parts. And Georgie is not yet really quite grown up.

Give my regards to old Broadway;
Say I'll be there ere long.

Who that has ever promenaded it, or shopped on it, or been car blocked on it, but has felt at some time the call of Broadway? The call of the bright street is heimweh, acute homesickness, a longing for far faces, a restless cry of the heart. Broadway is not wholly beautiful. It is its cheerfulness that appeals. Yet it has its wraiths.

One of THE DRAMATIC MIRROR'S admiring friends has written it complaining of her husband's inconsistencies. She says he preaches high thinking and the same sort of living, but that his practices are quite otherwise. She begs THE DRAMATIC MIRROR to give her a word of counsel, but asks it in the same breath not to give her away. Whether this question was too great or too trivial for the masculine intellects of THE MIRROR does not appear, but the letter did appear in the Matinee Girl's budget with a request to please answer. 'Twas ever thus with men. When they don't openly apologize for the shortcomings of their brethren they do so by a silence that is vastly charitable.

I confess to a very plain spoken disapproval of that man. I've met him before, through his wife's letters. Yet the situation is not a complex one. There are only two horns of a dilemma. She declines to snatch one horn, which is to leave him. Obviously but one remains. That is to make the best of what would seem to be a much frayed and intrinsically worthless bargain.

There are two means of doing this. A few practical, everyday philosophers I have known who have learned the difficult art of never minding. You know the old saw, that recurs to us with ancient wisdom:

"If there is a remedy, find it.
If there isn't, never mind it."

Now, these two methods of never minding are entirely unlike. They are practiced according to the temperament of the individual. One is to disregard the inconsistencies with which our inquirer says she is tortured. A man whose responsibilities are great, and to the casual eye seem harrowing, said to me: "There are so many things that don't matter." He smiled, while his keen eyes narrowed, and I understood that he had given me his prescription for keeping out of a mad house. I respectfully submit it for the consideration of our correspondent.

Another method is that of many long suffering, finally conquering women. Some characters have painfully sharp angles that may not be knocked off, much as we would like to perform that rough operation. They may, however, be worn away gradually to a comfortable roundness by long, patient, loving effort. The method of gentle attrition is submitted as the only alternative known to the Matinee Girl.

Although some of my good friends on the stage have assured me that the business rules governing the profession are different from those that obtain in every other profession I do not believe it. Common sense is a big element in every department of life. It is one of the good things of which one can scarcely have a superfluity. It is as needful in steering an air ship as in digging a tunnel, and is indispensable in all the intermediate grades of activity and usefulness. A due regard for the rights and privileges of others is another business asset that will yield substantial dividends in the final summing up. Alertness for opportunity, fidelity in seeming trifles, and a rock of ages tenacity of purpose are as necessary to the subway workman as the Wall Street magnate.

Because of the basic commonness of these and other essentials of success in every path of effort, I quote this advice of Edwin Hawley, millionaire and railroad director, who began business life as an office boy, to the actor folk.

Some one asked him for the secret of his phenomenal success. "I have stuck to business," he replied. "I have never permitted the grass to grow under my feet. I have made it a principle all my life to be thorough and keep everlastingly at it."

THE MATINEE GIRL.

LUDLAM PUPILS IN ROMEO AND JULIET.

Following its excellent plan of using the advanced students for the casts of plays of all kinds and then playing them in Philadelphia and nearby cities with regular booking and enterprising advertising (they have given nearly a hundred plays in this way), the Ludlam Schools of Philadelphia and New York gave Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet in Trenton, N. J., Nov. 10, and Easton, Pa., Nov. 11, with the following cast:

Romeo	Henry Ludlam
Mercutio	Ernest Hudson
Paris	Leonard F. McGreevy
Capulet	Worthington Colfelt
Benvolio	Arthur Behrend
Tybalt	Albert W. Eschner
Friar Laurence	Wharton Henry
Peter	P. A. Crossland
Balthazar	Coleman Crowers
Sampson	John H. Cassady
Gregory	James McNulty
Apothecary	Joseph A. Fisher
Page	John H. Bowden
Juliet	Alva Crossley
Lady Capulet	Eleanor Davis
Nurse	Minnie Sauter

Ladies and gentlemen in the dance: Misses Crossley, Collier, Bailey, Roder; Messrs. Krause, Behrend, McGreevy, Bowden.

The production at Trenton was an important one locally, as Miss Crossley is a society favorite of this, her native, town, where she has often played in the principal amateur organization. Besides this her father is prominent in State politics and so sympathetic with his daughter's plans that he helped to advertise her throughout this region like a regular star. She has studied for two years and received excellent press notice for her work in Kitty Clive and Pygmalion and Galatea, and was fortunate in being under the direction of an experienced actor who has starred in Shakespearean plays and been a member of the companies of many leading stars and stock theatres and the head of a dramatic school for seventeen years. The presence of the teacher in the cast steadied and uplifted the whole representation, with his experienced interpretation and scholarly reading, and gave that sense of confidence which is the main lack and cause of the failure of so many beginners. The audience is usually indulgent, but this presentation of the masterpiece could be judged unbiased and ran as smoothly as if it had been played for weeks. The Governor, Senators and Congressmen were present, and the large auditorium was filled with the best of Trenton. Miss Crossley is just the right girlish age for the perennially young Juliet. She has a delightful stage presence and easy demeanor, which gave the audience entire confidence in her ability to meet any situation. Her gowns were beautiful and appropriate and worn with the easy grace of the period. Her lines were correct in emphasis and given with much tenderness of quality. Ususally the actress is too old to play the part when she knows enough to study it, but this sweet-voiced Juliet carried with her an atmosphere of the poetic illusions of maidenhood. Her fervent dreams of first love, as interpreted in the first act, had an unusual charm which might have been envied by many great stars.

It is the severest test of feminine ability to be tried in the white flame of this most severe of tests, but she gave us such a picture of wholehearted ingenuousness in the balcony scene that she received several curtain calls and an avalanche of flowers that paved the stage. Though marred by a few mannerisms she will yet correct, her work grew better and stronger as the play progressed, and her potion and death scenes were followed by hearty applause.

Taken altogether it was a most creditable school production and reflects great credit on this scholarly and enterprising director.

DRAMATISTS ENTERTAIN ADE.

George Ade was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the American Dramatists' Club at Delmonico's on the evening of Nov. 6. Bronson Howard presided and there were in attendance many persons important in the theatrical world. In response to a toast to "The latest successful American dramatist," Mr. Ade said in part: "I am pleased to see so many playwrights here gathered, as I understand that at the first meeting of the American playwrights there were not enough present to make a group. If more are needed we have several thousands in Indiana. Misery loves company, and so it is good for us to get together. We need sympathy and encouragement. Ours is a daring life. The fireman has to jump out of a window now and then, but the chances are that there is a net to save him. It is not so of us, not even of the actors.

"When the playwright on the night of an opening kisses his family good-night he does not know whether he is going home in an electric cab or an ambulance, and when the show is over he doesn't care. There is no task equally arduous to furnishing entertainment. The book may die unseen on the shelf. The play dies in public while the band plays."

JAMES NEILL.

James Neill, whose portrait appears on the first page of THE MIRROR, is at present in Seattle with his stock company, and will shortly bring to a close a long and profitable season there. In all of the larger cities of the West Mr. Neill is well and most favorably known as an actor-manager, and for a number of years past his stock company has been eminently successful.

Mr. Neill was, as a matter of fact, one of the pioneers in the revival of the stock company system. In Denver, a dozen years ago, he, with R. L. Giffen, had a company that would compare favorably with any Broadway organization. Among its members were T. Daniel Frawley, Blanche Bates, Madge Carr Cook, Harry Corson Clarke, and Phyllis Rankin. Since that time Mr. Neill has kept his company well up to the high standard that he then established.

Mr. Neill's ability as an actor is well known in New York through his many appearances as a leading man in Broadway productions before he entered stock work. As a manager he has been extremely conscientious toward his public, and in consequence he is held in high esteem in all the cities in which his company has appeared.

A YIDDISH SEASON FOR HARLEM.

Harlem has its first Yiddish theatre. It is the New Orpheum, in East 125th Street, and is under the management of Gottlieb, Rochstein and Lateiner. The New Orpheum, which was opened as a vaudeville house, will be devoted to the production of standard as well as new Yiddish comedies, dramas and operettas. The company includes Bella Shapiro, Annie Thomashefsky, Rosa Schrage, Regina Prager, Ida Natanson, Sarah Ferkauff, Eva Schoor, Elias Rochstein, Charles Natanson, William Conrad, Leopold Lansky, A. Schrage, Daniel Ferkauf, Theodore Wexler, and Samuel Schoor. The first bill was David's Violin, by James Lateiner, and was enthusiastically received by a large audience.

THE PARIS STAGE.

Numerous Productions—The Season Well Begun—Newsy Gossip.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

PARIS, Nov. 6.

Monsieur de la Palisse, an operetta in three acts by MM. Deflers and Caellavet, music by Claude Terrasse, was produced last Wednesday at the Théâtre des Variétés. The story is of a hero who is opposed to love, but becomes so entangled in situations and the meshes of the grand passion that he elopes with the niece of the Governor, where he poses as an ambassador. As the Governor elopes at the same time with the woman who is passing as his wife the plot ends happily. The dialogue and verses are charmingly written and the music appropriately catchy. The production was artistic and the piece pleased.

Mlle. Lucienne Bréval has been out of the Opéra cast because of a cold, but has reappeared. The throats of our song birds seem afflicted as with an epidemic.

Madame Emma Nevada will tour France and both sides of the Mediterranean until May, and appear in repertoire supported by the resident opera companies. She is accompanied by her husband, Dr. Palmer, and their daughter, Mlle. Mignon Palmer.

The Pantomime ballet, Feminissima, by MM. Jancey and Lemaire, was produced at the Casino de Paris Oct. 31.

La Tosca, which was to have been done Oct. 27 for charity, was postponed because of a cold from which Madame Eames was suffering at that time.

M. Coquelin has left us for Egypt, not for his health, but to give a series of representations in Cairo and Alexandria.

M. Antoine promises us King Lear in all its completeness of twenty-four tableaux, each with a different set. This is more uncut than they see it in New York or London, I believe.

Madame Aino Ackte stopped in our metropolis for only a short call en route from Scandinavia for her season at your Metropolitan Opera, for which she left Friday.

M. Edouard de Reszke notified his managers, Pendleton and Snow, that he would not go to your Republic this season unless they put up $5,000. This they declined to do, though they had booked forty concerts, unless he would put up an equal sum to guarantee them against loss.

Madame Calvé has unkindly sworn at Leipzig that she will never sing in a Wagner opera. Let us hope she was only momentarily affected by her German surroundings.

The committee in charge of the Horse Show for 1905 have decided to spend 125,000 francs in prizes. It will begin in March and run into April.

The Variétés gave Barbe-Bleue again Monday and La Fille de Madame Angot Tuesday night. The programme at the Opéra last week was: Monday, Salammbo; Wednesday, Don Juan; Friday, Valkyrie; Saturday, La Trouvère. At the Odéon, Le Cuvier and L'Avare were played Monday, La Déserteuse the remainder of the week. At the Comédie Française: Monday, L'Enigme and Le Marquise de Priola; Tuesday (matinee), Molière et Scaramouche Les Femmes Savantes and Le Médecin Malgré Lui; (evening) L'Autre Danger; Wednesday, Le Demi-Monde; Thursday (matinee), Hamlet; evening) Les Affaires Sont Les Affaires; Friday, Le Dédale; Saturday, L'Enigme and Le Paon. At the Opéra-Comique: Monday, Le Roy d'Ys; Tuesday, Le Jongleur de Notre Dame and Cavalleria Rusticana; Wednesday, Manon; Thursday, Alceste; Friday, Reine Flammette, and Don Juan for Saturday.

Chiffon, a play in three acts by MM. Peter and Dauceny, was produced Friday at the Théâtre de l'Athenée. This is a very clever treatment of the old trouble where the young wife (Chiffon) is married to an elderly husband and regrets she is not loved enough. Out of revenge she becomes involved with a secretary. The play, which is not great but bright, ends happily after an evening of amusing situations and dialogue.

L'Escalade, a play in five acts by M. Maurice Donnay was produced Saturday at the Théâtre de la Renaissance. This is an almost plotless treatment of the love of a philosopher for a young divorcée, into whose window he climbs; but it is charming because of the wit of its dialogue and the sentiment with which it is filled. If love alone will carry a play without plot, this ought to go far.

We have trusts and rumors of trusts. The latest is that we will have one which will soon have ten theatres in Paris. We critics will yet be compelled to form a trust to protect our time. Work is all right if it were not for the time one lost working.

Madame Eames had an ovation when she returned to Paris after a long absence and sang for us Puccini's La Tosca at the Opéra-Comique. MM. Marchi and Scotti were also in the cast, Scotti as Scarpio. It was prepared by Campanini.

BARON BORDEAUX.

THE TREASURERS' CLUB ELECTION.

The Treasurers' Club of America held a meeting in the Assembly Rooms of the Metropolitan Opera House Nov. 7, and elected the following officers: President, Max Hirsch, Metropolitan Opera House; Vice-President, J. H. J. Scullion, Wallack's Theatre; Treasurer, Earl H. King, Casino; Financial Secretary, Edward H. Fletcher; Recording Secretary, A. G. Faber. Board of Governors: Louis Morgenstern, Knickerbocker Theatre; Gilbert Gordon, New Amsterdam Theatre, and Arthur H. Sheldon, Garrick Theatre. It was decided to hold the club's annual entertainment on Feb. 12.

THE BARONESS FIDDLESTICKS.

The Baroness Fiddlesticks, F. C. Whitney's new musical comedy by De Long and Bruguier, was produced at the Stone Opera House in Binghamton, N. Y., Nov. 5. The cast included John E. Henshaw, Toby Claude, Richie Ling, Nella Bergen (Mrs. De Wolf Hopper), May Ten Broeck, Minnie Methot, Alden McClaskie, Walter Cluxton, and Mae Sherwood. The production is elaborate and Anna Fitzhugh in the leading role was well liked. The music is bright and catchy. It is planned to bring it to the Casino early in the season.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Richard Silver, Anna Osborn, and Theresa De Bley, by the Kaphan syndicate for their Carmen company (2).

Grace Hopkins, Harry W. Collins, Carlotta, Josephine Lynn, and T. F. Warhurst, by Harry Doel Parker for his Under Southern Skies company (Western).

Robert Pfarr for heavies, Lawrence Loudon for juveniles, and Golden Houston for juveniles, with the Stewart-Josephs company.

May Florine Linden, by Broadhurst and Currie for prima donna in Nat M. Wills' Son of Rest company.

Maurice Hedges, after closing a special engagement of ten weeks with At the Old Cross Roads, has been re-engaged to originate a part in A. C. Alston's new production, Shadows on the Hearth.

Edwin Belden, by Maurice Campbell for The Raven.

J. Frank Gibbons, for Arthur C. Alston's Shadows on the Hearth.

GOSSIP OF THE TOWN.

Foster Lardner, who is now playing Vladimir Simonson in Wagenhals and Kemper's production of Tolstoi's Resurrection, has been engaged by that firm to originate the leading juvenile role in their new play for Blanche Walsh, The Woman in the Case, by Clyde Fitch, to be produced in New York in January.

Wagenhals and Kemper are negotiating for the lease of the Murray Hill Theatre for a permanent home for their stars. If they secure the house Blanche Walsh will be the first attraction in Clyde Fitch's The Woman in the Case.

The theatre police squad of Broadway has been doubled. The eight extra men will look after the crossings in the theatre district. There will be twenty-two policemen on duty at the Metropolitan Opera House this year—the same number as last year.

Norman Hackett was honored by Theta Delta Chi Fraternity of Columbia University, who gave a large theatre party in his honor at the Knickerbocker Theatre last Saturday night.

Charles Mitchell, a brother of Julian Mitchell, has been added to the original cast of The Wizard of Oz, which returned to New York Nov. 7 and was greeted by a large audience. He plays Pastoria, pretender to the throne, and acquitted himself with credit to the name.

Samuel Colt, while in Milwaukee with Bird Center, gave an address on the art of acting to the pupils of the West Side High School at the request of the principal, Charles MacLenegan.

Lemuel B. C. Josephs left last week for St. Louis, where rehearsals will be held for the Stewart-Josephs company. Tour begins Nov. 16.

It Happened in Nordland is the name decided upon by Hamlin, Mitchell and Fields for the new musical play by Glen MacDonough and Victor Herbert, with which the new Lew Fields Theatre will be opened on Nov. 29. In the cast besides Lew Fields and Marie Cahill will be May Robson, Bessie Clayton, Rosemary Glosz, Marion Draughn, Billie Norton, Pauline Frederick, Maida Athens, Indiola Arnold, Harriet Forsythe, Josephine Karlin, Susan Parker, Diva Marolda, Harry Davenport, Joseph W. Herbert, Julius Steger, Harry Fisher, Joseph Carroll, Frank O'Neill, and sixty others.

Paul Hillis has recovered from his illness and rejoined the Burke-McCann company for the season. He will spend the Spring and Summer in stock in Philadelphia.

Frederick Nicholls is in Bellevue Hospital for an operation on his arm, and would be pleased to see or hear from his friends.

Cottages in Washington, D. C., owned by Mr. Sherwood, of the National Theatre in Washington; Mr. Allen, of Henry Miller's company, and Mr. Galloway, in Shore Acres, were burned Nov. 6 and many valuable mementoes of the great ones of the stage were destroyed.

Vera Treacy has been forced to leave the Over Niagara Falls company on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. Markillie.

Marie Paray, Hugh McKaye, and Carl Brickert, of the Grace Hayward company, were robbed of personal effects in Cairo, Ill. A number of arrests were made at the theatre, but the losers have no hope of recovering the lost articles.

Sarah Boyd, daughter of the late Belle Boyd, will star through the South and Southwest in a new play, Her Wilful Way. Miss Boyd will open her season early in January.

Homer R. Barton, who last year starred in one of Warner and Altman's pieces, is supporting Mattie Keene this season in vaudeville in Ella Wheeler Wilcox's playlets.

Frederick Paulding was so injured by Miss Kennark's using a real axe instead of a property one in Gismonda at the Alvin Theatre, Pittsburgh, Nov. 6, that there was no matinee the next day.

Election day was a record one in the attendance at New York theatres. No election returns were read from the stages except at the Savoy, Casino and the lower-priced houses, but they were posted in the lobbies to be consulted between the acts.

Helen Ormsbee, the understudy for Grace George in The Two Orphans, had a chance to play the part recently and acquitted herself creditably.

At the Thalia Theatre during the playing of King Lear in Yiddish, Nov. 8, a Jewish boy was fired for throwing apples from the gallery. In revenge he cried "Fire," and a panic was narrowly averted. Magistrate Cornell said he regretted he could not make the fine more than $10 for the dastardly trick, which might have resulted in a catastrophe.

The College Widow will be the first play burlesqued at the Weber Music Hall.

The Climbers, which has already been played in America, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, and South Africa, has been sold for production this season in Germany, Sweden, and Denmark.

Anna L. Bates will retire from her position as character woman with the Albee Stock company at Pawtucket, R. I., on Nov. 19, and will immediately join a Western stock company for the same line of work.

Erminie Earl, of The Runaways company, was taken suddenly ill during the recent engagement of the company in St. Paul, Minn., and was obliged to relinquish her part. Bessie Franklin, a member of the chorus, assumed the role on short notice and played it with decided success.

The Tifton (Georgia) Opera House was burned Nov. 4, and it is not probable that another will be erected in the near future.

Charles Dickson's new play, The Strenuosity of Teddy, by John Fowler, will begin its tour in December under the management of John M. Hickey, who has contracted to manage him for five years.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Wilson in Boston on Nov. 4.

IN OTHER CITIES.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Drusa Wayne, by Franklyn Fyles, had its first San Francisco presentation at the Alcazar on Monday night, Oct. 31-6. The play has somewhat of a problem, but not a very strong one. The incidents of the play are extremely dramatic. The first scene is laid in a Montana dance hall, the second on the battlefield in Cuba, and the other two are pictured in Newport and New York. The most exciting moment is the one in which the Red Cross nurse tears the bandage from the wound of an injured soldier, whom she recognized as her betrayer. Lillian Lawrence, as Drusa, did very well with a part not wholly suited to her. John Craig did a clever bit of acting in the drunken scene in the first act. Luke Conness, as Jim Jarvis, the Englishman with a cockney accent, was good. Adele Belgarde was a designing Violet Gilford. The balance of the cast were acceptable in small roles. Next week, Prince Karl.

At the California Oct. 30-5 we are having the first minstrel show of the season. On Sunday night Haverly's Minstrels and Billy Van were accorded a big reception. The curtain rose upon an effective stage setting, the interior of a watermelon. Several good voices are with the co., especially a remarkably clear tenor in the person of Walter Dorsay. Franklyn A. Batie rendered two new songs in a delightful baritone ypice. Jimmy Wall made quite a hit with his parodies and funny sayings. But to Billy Van, who is a great favorite here, belongs the credit of much of the success of the performance. His monologue was the hit of the evening. Next week, Sweet Clover.

The Worst Woman in London has scored a big success at the Central Oct. 31-6. The plot is lurid enough to suit the most fastidious. Hershall Mayall was a hero greatly admired, and Ethel Clifton, as the heroine, easily gained the sympathy of the audience by her charming personality. Next week, Her Marriage Vow.

The Tivoli co. Oct. 31-6 presented The Messenger Boy. The production, though not on a par with The Toreador, was splendidly put on. Teddy Webb, who made such a decided impression in The Toreador, again displayed a brisk comedy talent in the Boy. Willard Simms was excellent in the other comedy role. Dora de Fillippe's charming voice never appeared to better advantage and her two solos were well rendered. Mary Young made her reappearance and received quite an ovation in her singing of "Mazie." Carrie Reynolds also returned and danced with her usual grace and sprightliness. Bessie Tannehill remains the same old favorite. The comedy will have a long run.

At the Columbia Oct. 31-6 is Isadore Rush in Glittering Gloria. This production has not received many favorable notices. It seems too bad, for Miss Rush had always scored here. The play is a very poor vehicle for her versatility, but her songs are sung just as prettily as they were when she first introduced that charming little coon ballad, "I Want Yer Ma Honey," which afterward became so popular. Next week, The County Chairman.

It is quite a long time since we have had Shakespeare in stock. On Monday night, Oct. 30-6, at the Majestic Theatre, Hamlet was given to a packed house, and the performances all through the week have been well attended. J. H. Gilmour in the title-role was more than acceptable in the part. Howard Gould was strong as Laertes. Richard Thorton impressed as the Ghost, and Frank MacVicars, as Claudius; George Woodward, as Polonius, and Harry Mestayer, as Horatio, did their parts intelligently. Amelia Gardner made a beautiful Ophelia and Eleanor Gordon did well as the Queen. The stage settings, as has been the rule at this theatre, were perfect in every detail and attractive as well. Next week, An American Citizen.

Fischer's Theatre has been thoroughly renovated and invitations have been issued to inspect the new house Monday night. A special performance is to be given to let the public see what is to be offered. The first week's bill is said to be a very strong one.

At the Grand Opera House Oct. 30-6 Jane Corcoran and Andrew Robson are being seen in Pretty Peggy and are meeting with much favor. The production is certainly a very beautiful one, and not even the smallest detail has been omitted to make the performance a most creditable one. Miss Corcoran displays great ability in the role of Peg Woffington and is entitled to her position upon the boards. Andrew Robson, as David Garrick, did admirable work in the role and deserves special praise. The cast was a long one, and each individual member acted as though they had been especially engaged for the part. Pretty Peggy will do a big two weeks' business, and will be followed by The Fatal Wedding.

OSCAR SIDNEY FRANK.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Dockstader's Minstrels drew large houses at English's 4, 5 and were heartily welcomed after a two weeks' lull at this theatre. It was strictly a blackface show, including the orchestra. The first part, by the entire co., was made up of good singing, dancing, and new jokes. Among the song hits were Dockstader's "Dar's a Dark Man Comin' with a Bundle," "You Done Me Wrong," by Leighton and Leighton; "The Countess of Alagazama," "Sleep, Baby Sleep," and encores by Matt Keefe, a favorite yodler, and the ballads of Maurice Romaine. The vaudeville olio was clever and funny. Carroll Johnson's dancing was much enjoyed, and Neil O'Brien's street car stunt made a decided hit and provoked hearty laughter. The biggest hit, however, was made by Dockstader himself in his monologue from an airship, and a stump speech that followed the wrecking of the ship in a storm. The show is one of the best of its kind seen here in recent years.

The all-star cast of The Two Orphans, one of the theatrical events of the local season, drew large audiences at English's 7, 8. Election night, 8, the house was sold out. The performance was extremely gratifying and pleasing from start to finish. Each star received an ovation on entering the stage, and many were the curtain calls at the end of every act. The play was beautifully staged and mounted. The reception Clara Morris received proves that she is still fondly remembered. She made a strong impression as Sister Genevieve. The part of Louise was well played by Aphia James, who took Grace George's place, who it is said has left the co. It seems unnecessary to speak individually of each star, since each and every one gave such fine portrayals of their parts. It is sufficient to say that the all-star cast was a treat long to be remembered. The Royal Chef 11, 12. Nat Goodwin 14. Viola Allen 18, 19. Wilton Lackaye 21, 22. Frank Daniels 23, 24.

Shore Acres, old and yet so young in the hearts of theatregoers, delighted large audiences at the Park 3-5. The production, with an excellent co., including James T. Galloway, Atkins Lawrence, Burt Flansburg, James Burrows, Elwyn Stevens, James T. Galloway, Jr., Belle Theadore, and Frank A. Denson is far ahead of any play produced at this theatre this season.

Billy (Single) Clifford, smiling and funny, pleased large houses 7-9 at the Park. He has been seen many times here in vaudeville, but this was his first appearance in a play of his own. How He Won Her is a combination of musical comedy and vaudeville with only a glimmer of a plot. Clifford introduced good monologues and some catchy songs, in which he was assisted by the chorus. Jennie and Clara Austin did a clever singing and dancing act. Victoria Sawtelle and Gladys Sears won many encores; their coon songs were especially well done. Walters and Gano, old vaudeville favorites, gave an old-time minstrel act. Nellie McHenry in M'liss 10-12. McFadden's Flats 14-16. After Midnight 17-19. Across the Pacific 21-23. Paris by Night 24-26. No Wedding Bells for Her 28-30.

The engagement of Fay Templeton and Peter F. Dailey at English's has been canceled. Harry Rowe Shelly, organist and composer, of New York, will give an illustrated lecture 18, on the programme that Eugene Ysaye is to play at English's 28. Mrs. Sue Harrington Furbeck, contralto, of Chicago, will be the soloist of the first Maennerchor concert of the season 11.

Louis W. Jones, of this city, who is traveling with the Kilties' Band as press agent during their trip in the British Isles, sometimes dons a costume and sings in the Kilties choir. He wore this dress when he sang with them before King Edward and his court at Balmoral Castle, in the Highlands, a few weeks ago.

PEARL KIRKWOOD.

LOS ANGELES.

The Texas Steer was the offering at the Mason Oct. 31-2, but the business done was not of the heavy and rushing order, but more on the appreciative style. In other words, it was not satisfactory to the box-office. There is no doubt but this is one of Hoyt's best plays, and the co. playing it this season is probably better fitted than any we have had so far. The trouble is that we have all seen The Steer from time immemorial, and, even if it is political time, it has failed to carry its old time interest. Bernard Shaw's comedy, Candida, 3-5. Haverly's Minstrels 7-9. Gloria 10-12. San Toy 14-19.

Ben Greet's excellent co. of players gave this city something out of the ordinary in dramatics in the way of Everyman at Hazard's Pavilion 31-5. It was heralded as the old morality play, but in some ways mortality would have suited it about as well. True it is that this style of drama has no appeal to the frivolous, but to the studious person, the deep thinker and the follower of religous thought. The co. as a whole is most evenly balanced, and in Miss Crawley Mr. Greet has an actress of rare ability, convincing in manner and high in her art. Attendance for the week was of the increasing kind from the first night.

White Whittlesey opened his second week at the Burbank 30-5 in The Second in Command to a packed house on Sunday, and splendid attendance during the balance of the week. This entertaining play is fresh in our minds, for it has not been so very long ago that we had the pleasure of seeing John Drew cast as Major "Kit" Bingham. In the character Mr. Whittlesey appears to splendid advantage. His ease and grace and manly bearing create instant favor, and the support do so much better work than in Heartease that the piece made a decided hit. Of course the sumptuous staging added materially. L. R. Stockwell's co. will open 6 in A Temperance Town.

Clyde Fitch's Lovers' Lane was the attraction at Belasco's 1-6, and the house was well filled every night in the week. The piece met with splendid favor. Martin Alsop in the part of Rev. Thomas Singleton created an impresion with the audience on the opening night that won him not a few calls. Thomas Oberle gave all there was to the character of Herbert Woodbridge, the "villanous" man. First Born is billed for 7-13. It is whispered that Mr. Alsop and Adele Brock will sever their connections with the co. at the end of their contracts and leave for the East, but we are promised that Miss Brock's place will be filled by Amelia Gardner, late leading lady of Morosco's Stock co.

The Casino had them coming its way 30-5 to see Richard Harlow in Evangeline. The coquettish, feminine-mannered Harlow as Catherine won as much praise as he did in 1492, and, together with the splendid support of Lottie Kendall and the balance of the co., the opera was given a dash that satisfied. Mr. Harlow's engagement ends this week, and for the twenty-sixth week of the Olympia Opera co., and, by the way, their farewell week, 6-12, we will have the pleasure of listening to The Two Vagabonds.

As usual the Grand Opera House was filled with its customary lovers of melodrama 30-5 to see For Her Sake. The play has the general run of intense plot, and all were satisfied. Arizona 6-12.

The Chutes' balloon ascensions are proving good drawing cards, and together with its large menagerie, green grass and trees, and pretty flower beds, it is a very attractive spot to visit. To the Easterner this little oasis of 13 acres right in the heart of the city must be somewhat of a revelation, for here we have grass and flowers the year around, and our Summer gardens never close for "the season." In fact, the Winter season is the best paying.

DON W. CARLTON.

MINNEAPOLIS.

Clothes do not make the man, but they often serve as a good introduction. So a good title for a play often serves to bring the people into the theatre—once. The Jewel of Asia sounds good; in fact, is good, for a title, but it has evidently lost much of its lustre in the setting. We had it at the Metropolitan Opera House 3-5 and it took no gem expert to discover the flaws. The utter don't-care-manner in which the co. entered into their work was more than enough to spoil even a good piece. But such a manner will absolutely kill anything that has no more to recommend it than has "The Jewel." William Blaisdell is the one bright exception to this rule, and, be it said to his credit, he tries hard and, with some measure of success, to make things "go." The star, Vera Michelena, could do better if she would. She has a pure, sweet, soprano and only needs a little "ginger" to place her in the front ranks. Scenery and costumes were adequate. Babes in Toyland followed 7-9 and did a large business. Beautifully staged, lavishly costumed, and presented by such a capable co. as Mr. Mitchell gave us, it could not fail to plase. Nothing more winsomely jolly can be conceived than the Jane of Mabel Barrison. Ignacio Martinetti as Alan gave us some comedy work that will long be remembered. Charles Guyer as Grumio, and Nellie O'Neil as Jill received an ovation for their knockabout dance in the second act. Mr. Guyer's pantomine in the same act was about as clever a piece of work as we have ever seen here. May de Souza was a charming Contrary Mary. Bessie Wynn displayed a sweet soprano and made a very handsome Tom Tom. The other nursery characters were in capable hands. John F. Ward and Joseph Green as Uncle Barnaby and the Master Toymaker were good. George A. Stone and William D. Gaston contributed some grotesque dancing that was well received. Gus Pixley mars his work by poor enunciation. Kyrle Bellew in Raffles 10-12. Wizard of Oz 13-16. Frank Daniels in The Office Boy, and The Billionaire follow.

Her First False Step drew crowded houses at the Bijou Opera House 6-12 and proved one of the best melodramas seen here this season. It is full of thrills and all the other accessories that go to make up a play of this sort are found in abundance. Presented by a capable co., it pleased well. Hearts Adrift 13-19.

The Nominee was given a well staged production by the Ferris Stock co., at the Lyceum 6-12 and played to fair business. It is not a "stock play," but gives most every one some chance. Dick Ferris as Jack Medford found a role that was much to his liking and managed to get out of it all the comedy possible. Lew Stone gave an excellent performance as Leopold Bunyon. Leslie Morosco made a good Porter Vane. In his line of work Mr. Morosco is very clever. Charles C. Burnham as Pete, and William H. Murdoch as Colonel Murray did all that was required of them well. Claudia Lucas was a charming Mabel Medford, and Lelia Shaw a very dashing Annie Harrison. Wynona Bridges made her first appearance with the co. as Mrs. Van Barclay, and judging from her work will prove a welcome addition. Gertrude Raymond, another new member, made a very pretty Rose Van Barclay. Florence Stone in Theodora 13-19. The Henrietta 20-26.

Frederick Clarke is to take out Way Out West and will open at Northfield, Minn., about 20. Time is already booked up to January.

CHARLES M. LANE.

PROVIDENCE.

At the Providence Opera House Nov. 3-5 The Red Feather did a very large business, the house being sold out for every performance. The opera duplicated its last season's success, and Grace Van Studdiford's singing was a revelation. She was surrounded by a good co, among whom were Roy Alton, Louis Casavant, Myron P. Davis, William McCarthy, Lucy Monroe, Cora Tracy, and Benjamin McGahen. As last season, the opera was lavishly staged and costumed. A large house greeted Checkers at the opening 7-12, and the applause indicated that the performance was an enjoyable one. Thomas W. Ross was again seen in the leading part, which he played effectively. Dave Braham, Jr., as Push Miller, Charles Willard as Uncle Jerry, Katherine Mulkins as Pert, and Harriet Worthington as Sadie Martin were excellent in their parts. The race track scene was very realistic. Business was fair. Fritzi Scheff in Two Roses 14-16. Mrs. Gilbert in Granny 17-19.

The Thoroughbred as produced by the Stock co. at the Imperial 7-12 proved enjoyable and good business was done. Malcolm Williams had the role of A. V. Decker, which he played with the same ease and naturalness that marks all his presentations, and Florence Reed was successful as Wilhelmina Carlingham. Other parts were well played by Percy Jennings, Minnie Radcliffe, Viola Burton, Adeline Dunlap, Harry Barfoot, Regan Hughston, Albert Roberts, and Ben Graham. Matinees are now given daily at this house. The School for Scandal 14-19.

The melodrama, A Fight for Love, was the attraction at the Empire 7-12, and the production was notable in that Robert Fitzsimmons played a part that allowed him to turn up at various intervals and right wrongs that were being perpetrated on a young heiress. He also gave an exhibition of bag punching and in the last act puts on the gloves. Mrs. Fitzsimmons (Julia May Gifford) scored a hit in the role of Vivian Ellington. Her singing and acting were good. Other good work was done by J. K. Hutchinson as Horace Sheppard. Business very good. Stella Mayhew in Flo Flo 14-19.

Rip Van Winkle will be put on at the Imperial Christmas week by Malcolm Williams and the stock co.

William H. Crane comes to the Providence Opera House shortly in Business Is Business. The new Oriental comic opera, A China Doll, and The Beauty and the Beast are also booked for the Providence.

At a meeting of Providence Lodge, 10, Theatrical Mechanical Association, held 6, a committee was appointed to arrange for the annual banquet of the Lodge to be held the first Sunday in January. William F. Doolen, the popular stage-manager of the Providence Opera House, was chosen as delegate to the national convention, T. M. A., to be held in San Francisco next July.

Malcolm Williams has just closed a contract with Alice Kauser for The Conquerors, which will be produced at the Imperial Dec. 5-10.

The Grenadier Guards Band of Great Britain gave two concerts at Infantry Hall Oct. 17 to large and delighted audiences.

H. Cornelius Gardner, advance agent for Checkers, did an unusual stunt here last week in advertising his attraction. He made arrangements with street railway people whereby every car had a hanger on the dasher.

HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

DETROIT.

Chauncey Olcott opened to good business at Detroit Opera House Nov. 7 for a three evenings' engagement in A Romance of Athlone. Mr. Olcott has a large following here, and among a class of persons who are not regular frequenters of the theatre. The play is of sufficient strength to sustain interest, the story being laid in the town of Athlone, in Ireland, in the dawn of the nineteenth century. It is largely imaginative. The costuming is very picturesque, and the production is elaborately staged. Mr. Olcott's voice is the one great attraction, as usual, and it is always a pleasure to listen to his charming little ballads. His picture of Dick Ronyane was very pleasing and won him much applause. Baroness Fiddlesticks 10-12.

A very creditable performance of W. S. Gilbert's Engaged was given by pupils of Prof. Marcus La Blanche in Masonic Temple Auditorium 3, under the auspices of Zion Lodge, F. and A. M. It was staged in a fitting manner and was witnessed by an audience that crowded every available space. Much praise was bestowed on the performers for the excellent manner in which each filled their respective parts, particularly Bessie M. Thomas, who fairly crowned herself with glory as Belinda Treherne. Miss Thomas is new here, but the impression she created will not soon be forgotten. Hortense Stuart was very popular as Minnie Symperson, Louise Baker as Mrs. MacFarlane, J Bernice Macklem as Maggie MacFarlane, Euphremia Greer as Parker, Sidney J. Leach as Bilvawney, Fred W. Reik as Mr. Symperson. A. E. E. Parsons doubled the role of Angus Macalister and Major McGillicuddy and Mr. La Blanche gave a very skillful characterization of Cheviot Hill. Music for the occasion was furnished by Round's Ladies' Orchestra.

Edmund Day's revised and enlarged edition of Pals is making its first appearance at the Lyceum 6-12 with James J. Corbett, Hal Davis, and Inez Macauley in the prominent roles. The author has built the play to exhibit the ex-pugilist's accomplishments, but Mr. Corbett has achieved something more than his skill as a boxer. His histrionic talents are improving, and his performance throughout was praiseworthy. He has a ready fund of humor and looks graceful Mr. Davis and Inez Macauley, recruits from vaudeville and old friends here, were accorded a warm reception. Others in the co. are John Edward Trevor, Madeline Garcia, Emma Hayner, W. A. Quirk, W. F. Powell, and Florence Hamilton. The play has been given an elaborate setting and it is needless to say the demand for tickets far exceeded the capacity of the house. Paris by Night, next booking.

For a Brother's Crime is being revived at the Whitney 6-12 for the second time this year, and C. E. Blaney's well-built melodrama was accorded a rousing welcome. The entire cast, with the exception of Montgomery Irving, who still doubles the roles of Victor and Ben Sterling, is new and numbers Walter Morrison, the detective; Miss Lillia Allyn as Tessie, Celia Rosewood and Claire Schade as the Sterling children, William McClintock, George D. Hart, Edward H. Dallon, James A. Smith, D. C. Merrifield, Charles B. Carl, Forest Ludlow, G. Nathaniel Clay, Thomas Randall, Elizabeth Rathburn, and Florence Eldridge. The Waif's Paradise 14-19.

The Lafayette 6-12 offers a well produced revival of Barbara Frietchie, with Meta Maynard in the name part, which she handles with rare skill. Miss Lamont as Sally Negley, Miss Elder as Sue Royce, Miss Fairfield as Laura Royce, Miss Muir as Mrs. Hunter, Miss Delaro as Mammy Lee, Mr. Glazier as Captain Trumbull, Mr. Cummings as Stonewall Jackson, Mr. Frazier as Fred Gelix, Mr. Henderson as Mr. Frietchie, Mr. Foster as Arthur Frietchie, Mr. Bressen as Colonel Negley, Mr. Beamish as Jack Negley, and Mr. La Coste as Dr. Hal Bovd complete the cast.

A. FRANCIS.

KANSAS CITY.

A Chinese Honeymoon was the Willis Wood attraction 6-9, pleasing good audiences at each performance. The piece was seen here last season, but the co. this year contained none of the same people, so in a way the show was almost new. The present co. suffers little if any by comparison, both players and equipment being fully up to former standards. Georgia Bryton was the Fi Fi this time, and her work in the role made famous here by Toby Claude, left little to be desired. George Broderick as the Emperor, John E. Kearney as Pineapple, Joseph E. Miller as the Lord Chancellor, Robert Grant as Tom Hathaway carried the principal male roles excellently. In the chief feminine parts Regina McAvoy as Mrs. Pineapple, Eveleen Dunmore as the princess, and Mabella Baker as the official mother-in-law also deserve praise. The chorus, which was prettily costumed, was a very pleasing feature. The Eternal City 10-12. Eva Tanguay in The Sambo Girl 13-16. Babes in Toyland 17-19. Woodland 20-26.

Ward and Vokes, that inimitable team of fun makers, made their annual appearance at the Grand 6-12 and played to capacity audiences at nearly every performance. A Pair of Pinks is retained as their vehicle again this season, but is brightened up by many new songs and jokes and proved entirely satisfactory. As Percy and Harold, the comical pair dealt out a brand of fun all their own that never failed to make a hit. Lucy Daly and Margaret Daly-Vokes were also much in evidence, the former's dancing scoring the usual hit, while the latter's comedy caused much laughter. Charles Howard was very acceptable as the Jew, while other principals included Will West, Tony Williams, Lou Miller, Dan Coleman, Eddie Judge, Rose Bird, Lillian Lerner, and Marrionne Priest. Pretty staging and costuming and a good looking chorus was not the least part of the performance by any means. Williams and Walker 13-19. In Old Kentucky 20-26.

Across the Pacific, probably the most popular of the many popular annual offerings that come to the Gilliss, again held the boards at that house 6-12, playing to packed houses nightly. Harry Clay Blaney continues in the play and gives as lively and spirited performance as he did some six seasons ago, when the play was first produced. The supporting co. were adequate to the demands made upon them, while the staging and costumes were fully up to former standards. Wedded, but No Wife, 13-19.

To Die at Dawn, a new melodrama of the stirring type, drew good audiences at the Auditorium 6-12. Elsie Crescy was featured in the production and proved very capable in the leading role. E. Laurence Lee, Will Rath, William J. Maddern, and Leo Nadel deserve praise for well played parts. The production was appropriately staged and costumed. Ben Hendricks in Ole Olson 13-19.

The Phillipine Constabulary Band of eighty-two pieces played two concerts in Convention Hall 12 to fair audiences. The organization proved themselves very superior musicians and all who heard them were more than pleased.

Manager Louis Shouse, of Convention Hall, announces that roller skating will again be inaugurated in the big building, beginning Saturday night, 12. The sport was very popular here last Winter and also proved very profitable for the hall. New skates and music by Wheeler's Orchestra should make the affair a bigger success than last season.

D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

BUFFALO.

That magnetic actress, Ethel Barrymore, in her new comedy-drama, Sunday, was the attraction at the Star Nov. 7-12. Really, the success of the play rests upon the fair shoulders of Miss Barrymore, who acts the title-role with all her own peculiar charm and magnetic monotone voice. Bruce McRae as Colonel Brinthorpe is manly, effective, and tender at the right time, and the rest of the co., especially Edgar Selwyn as Jacky, were fully equal to the requirements. By far the most fashionable audiences of the season were seen during the Barrymore engagement. Chauncey Olcott 14-19.

A Bachelor's Romance occupied the boards at the Teck 7-12. James Durkin as David Holmes, the bachelor, was admirable. He was exceptionally good in the first act, where he appears as the shopworn old literary hack, with his musty old books and reviews, and his much more shopworn old secretary Martin, a part Frederick Julian produces with artistic finish. Bertha Creighton as Sylvia Sommers was charming attractive and just demure enough to be exceedingly winsome. In preparation, Puddn'head Wilson.

William T. Keogh's The White Tigress of Japan opened a week's engagement at the Lyceum 7. The plot of the play deals with the present Russo-Japanese War. Considerable comedy is furnished by Harry Morehead as Bob and Austin McKugh, well and favorably known here, as Raymond Grant. Several times during the play clever acrobatic work is done by T. Tomamoto.

That very clever comedienne, Gertrude Swiggett, was the attraction at the Academy 7-12, presenting Tilly Olson. Miss Swiggett has surrounded herself with a fairly good co. During the play several pleasing specialties were introduced, especially pleasing being the Newsboys' Quartette.

Louis Whiting Gay, of this city, has resumed his tour with Creatore's Band, for which organization he is now acting as business-manager.

The Garrett Club, composed entirely of young women, will be seen in vaudeville 12, the proceeds to be devoted to charity.

The Park Theatre, under the management of Michael Shea, will be opened about Christmas week with the William Farnum Stock co., having as its leading lady Percy Haswell, who has been identified with a stock co. in Baltimore for several seasons. When the Park is completed it is expected that it will surpass any theatre in this country.

Charles W. McMahon has severed his connection with Mr. Dee and has opened up a suite of offices in the Lewis Block, devoting his attention to vaudeville and dramatic work.

The McMahon Concerts at the Academy on Sunday nights are the talk of the town, the S. R. O. sign being displayed at every concert.

P. T. O'CONNOR.

DENVER.

A magnificent production of The Eternal City was given at the Broadway Oct. 31-5 by Edward Morgan and an excellent co. The scenery is especially beautiful, and the incidental music, composed by Pietro Mascagni, very effective. Mr. Morgan is all that David Rossi should be and presents a virile portrait of Hall Caine's hero. Mr. Morgan never rants, but reaches every climax with quiet, artistic effect. Janet Waldorf is pleasing, but not quite satisfying as Donna Roma Valonna. Her enunciation is particularly laudable and were she just a bit more sympathetic her reading would be faultless. W. E. Bonney's Bruno Rocco was a splendid characterization. That fine old actor, Frank C. Bangs, made His Holiness the Pope a very real and very beautiful character. Frederic de Belleville was excellent as the Prime Minister, and Henry Harmon played Minghelli, the spy, with fine intelligence. The minor parts were in capable hands. Prices will be advanced to $2 during Maxine Elliott's engagement 7-12. A Chinese Honeymoon 13-19. Glittering Gloria 21-26. San Toy 28-Dec. 3.

The Tabor was crowded at each of the ten performances of The Show Girl 30-5. It is advertised as "a musical tomfoolery," and that's all it is, just a lot of specialties strung together without any particular rhyme or reason. But it proved to be the most amusing show we have had at the Tabor this season. Hilda Thomas, the star of the play, is sui generis. She could make a graven image laugh, and is certainly an artist in her own particular line. Lou Hall was also exceedingly droll. His make-up and facial expression were remarkably good. Sam J. Mylie as the theatrical manager, and Thomas J. Shea as the actor added much to the merry-making. Estelle Bird made a stunning Show Girl. She was warmly welcomed by her many Denver friends, who were pleased to note her advancement in the profession, as she graduated from a local dramatic school about three years ago. The chorus was above the average. York State Folks plays a return date 6-12. At the Old Cross Roads 13-19. Shore Acres 20-26. Williams and Walker 27-3.

In Darkest Russia, presented by a capable co., drew well at the Curtis 30-5. E. J. Carpenter's A Little Outcast, with Millicent Evans, is the attraction 6-12. Black Patti Troubadours 13-19. Among the early bookings at the Curtis are Blanche Bates in The Darling of the Gods and Jim Jeffries.

The following musical events are chronicled: Melba will sing at the Central Presbyterian Church Jan. 24; Paderewski will appear Saturday afternoon and evening, April 14; Savage's Grand Opera co. will present the English version of Parsifal at the Broadway the first week in April; the Metropolitan Grand Italian Opera co., with Nordica and Caruse, are also announced to appear early in the Spring; the first concert of this season by the Denver Symphony Orchestra will be given at the Broadway Nov. 18.

MARY ALKIRE BELL.

LOUISVILLE.

Maude Adams played The Little Minister at Macauley's 4, 5 to the capacity of the house. Her supporting co. was an excellent one, especially Arthur Byron. The stage settings were particularly beautiful and the incidental music noteworthy. The house will be dark until 11, 12, when the all-star cast will be seen in an elaborate revival of The Two Orphans. Interest in this coming event is evidenced through the advance sale of seats. Dockstader's Minstrels 14.

Charlie Grapewin in the musical farce The Awakening of Mr. Pipp drew excellent business at the Masonic 7-12. He has a large supporting co., prominent in which are a number of attractive girls, and the specialties introduced are thoroughly up-to-date. Joseph Murphy opens in his familiar repertoire 14-29.

Patrice paid her annual visit to the Avenue, playing a week's engagement commencing 6. The play, Driven from Home, afforded her ample opportunity for display of her ability, which is peculiarly her own. The Smart Set 13-19.

Frederick Warde during his stay here with Salsmmbo at Macauley's talked in an entertaining way to a writer for the "Times" concerning the project of the National B. P. O. E. for the erection of a suitable monument at the Elks' Home at Bedford, Va. Mr. Warde is chairman of the committee and is an enthusiast on the subject.

It is understood that Kate Ray is intrusted with one of the small parts in The Two Orphans. She is a beautiful Kentucky girl, and is connected by ties of relationship with several of the most prominent families in the State.

Walter S. Matthews, formerly a member of Thomas W. Keene's co. and of late years prominent in business circles in this city, has taken up his residence in New York and is engaged in literary and dramatic work. He has written and successfully disposed of several vaudeville sketches, and his melodrama, The Stain of Guilt, is one of the successes of the season on the Stair-Havlin circuit.

Manager John T. Macauley and his able lieutenant, John L. Crovo, business-manager, wear broad smiles as result of the excellent business done by all of the attractions which have appeared at that house so far during the season.

Patrice, grown stout, recalls memory of her first appearance here in Clio with Harold Forsberg some years ago, then a mere slip of a girl. A Louisville writer of an impressionable age wrote at that time a fervid article so eulogistic of her physical charms that it is still a legend in local journalism.

CHARLES D. CLARKE.

ST. PAUL.

Henry W. Savage's production of Woodland, the attraction at the Metropolitan 3-5, is by far the best thing in the musical comedy line seen here this season, and equaled by only a few in past seasons. What a unique idea of weaving an opera around the bird kingdom! The piece is put on in a most sumptuous manner. As the Jail Bird, Harry Bulger is great. He is one of the funniest men on the stage to-day. On the opening night here Mr. Bulger was compelled to make a speech, to which honor he responded in a very neat manner. In the funmaking Frank Doane, as General Rooster, was a close second. Mr. Doane, however, should study nature a little more closely and get a call that somewhere near approaches that of the fowl he represents. Cheridah Simpson, at Prince Eagle, sang well. The part is not long enough for one with so good a voice, however. Ida Brooks Hunt, as Miss Nightingale, possesses a very rich soprano voice, and all her songs were beautifully rendered. Emma Carus, as Lady Peacock, also deserves credit for good vocal work. She is a good actress. In these days of affectation on the operatic stage, it was a rare treat to witness the work of Margaret Sayre as Miss Turtle Dove. Her song, "The Tale of a Turtle Dove," captivated the entire house by the manner in which she rendered it. May we zee more of her. The balance of the cast were good, and the chorus is very strong and well trained.

How well we remember Kyrle Bellew in The Gentleman of France, and we gladly welcome him in his new play, Raffles, as produced at the Metropolitan 7-9. Raffles is a possible story, but not a probable one; but for all that Mr. Bellew is the same polished actor as of old. Mr. Holland, as the detective, shared honors with the star, and justly. Much of the success of the piece depends on him, which would be lost with a less experienced actor in the role. Babes in Toyland 10-12. Frank Daniels 13-16.

Several novel features go to make Hearts Adrift, the attraction at the Grand 6-12, one of the best melodramas of its kind on the road. E. L. Snader as the hero, Captain Teddy, acts well, as does also Aileen Berteele in the part of Rosie Barkworth. The co. is large and as a whole quite capable. Business was good throughout the week. Ralph Stuart in By Right of Sword 13-19.

J. A. WEEKS.

MILWAUKEE.

Wilton Lackaye and a good supporting co. appeared at the Davidson 7-9 in The Pit. Though seen here before, the attendance was large and the performance excellent. In the large cast notable performances were given by Robert Warwick, William Hazeltine, A. H. Stuart, Kingsley Benedict, R. E. Harcourt, Cavendish, Hale Hamilton, Quincy C. Bass, Jr., Jane Oaker, Agnes Findlay, Edmund H. Reardon, and Beulah Watson. Arnold Daly 10-12. The Billionaire 13-16. Frank Daniels 20, 21. Ezra Kendall 22, 23. Wizard of Oz 24-26.

The Thanhouser co. gave a brisk and amusing performance of Charley's Aunt at the Academy 7 before a large and well pleased audience. James Kyrle MacCurdy as the pseudo aunt gave as plausible and consistent a characterization as was possible, and made his auditors shriek with laughter. Mace Greenleaf and Albert Brown played Chesney and Wykeham in the proper spirit. Lee Baker and Irving Brooks as the old men were good. Edith Evelyn and Grace May Lamkin looked very sweet and girlish as the two young ladies. Kate Woods Fiske made a most dashing Donna Lucia, and Patty Allison was a chic and attractive Ela Delahay. A clever bit was done by Reginald Parry as Brassett. The comedy was prettily staged. The Second Mrs. Tanqueray 14-20.

The Curse of Drink is the ominous title of Charles E. Blaney's great temperance play, which opened to an overflowing house at the Bijou 6. The melodrama has lots of interest and though the main incidents are reminiscent of by-gone productions of the kind, the audience applauded to the echo. P. Aug. Anderson drew a vivid picture of the drunkard, and Frank J. Kirke gave a consistent and convincing portrayal of the heavy role. Harry De Vere acted in a manner that promises future success, and satisfactory renditions were offered by Fannie Argyle, William Stuart, Anna Hollinger, and Ollie Craig. The Transatlantic Four sang a number of selections well, but their impersonations in the play were spoiled by ridiculous make-ups. Kellar 13-19.

On the Suwanee River drew a big house at the Alhambra 6, and the interesting play of Southern life was thoroughly enjoyed. The presenting co. did full justice to the piece. Messrs. Clark and Rook and Miss Bennett scoring hits. The scenic effects are picturesque, and a male quartette adds much to the general success. Liberty Belles 13-19.

Schmetterlingsschlacht was given at the Pabst by the German Stock co. 6 before a moderate house. Die Goldene Eva will be presented 9, and William Tell 11. The Burton Holmes lectures will commence 15.

CLAUDE L. N. NORRIE.

SEATTLE.

Florence Roberts, who the week before had been most pleasingly welcomed by her many friends among the theatregoers of this city in Tess of the D'Urbervilles, appeared at the Grand Opera House in Marta of the Lowlands Oct. 30-2, and, as usual, met with the entire approval of large audiences. The star found fewer opportunities in this play than in others of her repertoire, but her work was marked with the customary sincerity. Herbert Bosworth, as Manelich; Lucius Henderson, as Sebastian, and William Yerrance were cast in the principal supporting parts and handled them capably. Frank Daniels, who has ever been welcomed here with a spirit of enthusiasm, renewed his former acquaintance with us in his production of The Office Boy 3-5 before large audiences. His facial and pedestrian eccentricities are still the same hit that they were in seasons past, and his songs, particularly "I'm on the Water Wagon Now," were as much of a success as we have heard they were in other cities. As usual, he has surrounded himself with a capable co., and a pleasing discovery to us was that his offering this season was much better than that of last. The Runaways 6-9. J. J. Jeffries 10. As You Like It 11, 12. Who's Brown 13-16. White Whittlesey 17-19.

The Neill co. packed the Seattle Oct. 30 for the opening performance of A Contented Woman, and business was good throughout the week. At this time a political play was naturally interesting, and the performance given by the Neill co. was a decidedly good one. Edythe Chapman was very good in the leading part. James Neill was at home in the comedy part of Cutting Hints. The rest of the co. as well gave further proof of their versatility. Harry Cashman, George Stuart Christie, John Harrington, and Ada Levick may be specially mentioned. The Holy City 6-12. Because She Loved Him So 13-19.

The Heart of Chicago at the Third Avenue Oct. 30-2, the first Lincoln J. Carter play of the season, established the record of this season for opening day attendance and continued to good business. John T. Nicholson was best among a satisfying co. Finnigan's Ball 6-12. Mason and Mason 13-19.

Faust proved a popular offering at the Alcazar by the Weidemann co. Oct. 30-5 to large business. Frank Fanning, as Mephisto; Russell Reed, as Faust; James S. Fulton, as Valentine, and Nellie Weidemann, as Marguerite, all did well. The Prince of Liars 6-12.

RODNEY D. WHITE.

MONTREAL.

Henry W. Savage's Prince of Pilsen co. opened to a good house at His Majesty's 7. Unlike many other cos., it has not deteriorated in its second season. The production is as good, if not better, than before. The scenery and costumes are fresh and new and the chorus pretty, and the various "show girls" in the "Song of the Cities" handsome and well gowned. Jess Dandy was a capital Wagner and scored with his song "Imagination." Arthur Donaldson was a handsome Prince, Percy F. Ames an amusing Wilberforce, and Ivar Anderson a good Tom. J. F. Sullivan made quite a hit as Francois. Trixie Fraganza was a charming widow. Almyra Forrest and Marie Welsh were respectively good as Edith and Nellie. Jeannette Bageard repeated her excellent performance of Sidonie. The orchestra was large and efficient. Girl from Kay's 14-19.

Nannette Comstock opened at the Academy 7 in The Crisis to good business. Miss Comstock makes a charming and dainty Virginia Carvel, but to those who remember her fine work in The Altar of Friendship the part seems to give her but small opportunity for the display of her abilities. John B. Cooke gave a fine, if somewhat strenuous, performance of Judge Whipple. Crosby Leonard made an excellent Stephen Brice. John Dugan was a fair Hopper. The rest of the co. were somewhat mediocre. The play was finely staged and costumed.

The Francais opens its career as a music hall 14 with Whoop-De-Doo for the bill. Burlesque goes back to the Royal.

Jess Dandy's birthday was 9, and after the evening's performance he entertained the whole of The Prince of Pilsen co., Manager Brookes and a number of the members of the press at a supper at the Boston Cafe. The members of the co. presented Mr. Dandy with a handsome gold-headed cane, for which he returned thanks in an appropriate speech. After supper and toasts, the tables were cleared away and dancing indulged in till the early hours of the morning. It was a most enjoyable affair.

W. A. TREMAYNE.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Sultan of Sulu appeared at the Tulane Nov. 6-12, and a competent co. interpreted the bright musical comedy. Thomas Whiffen in the title-role was most clever and was ably assisted by George O'Donnell, Walter Lawrence, Fred Frear, William Curtis, Maud William, Flo Irwin, and Nellie N. Chiquita. Boston Schoolma'ams were fair to look upon and the stage settings and chorus were of the best. The Silver Slipper 13-19.

The Baldwin-Melville Stock co. at the Greenwall Theatre presented Thelma to excellent business 6-12. Frank E. Camp and Janet Ford played the principal roles with the same consummate skill that has characterized all their work, and T. B. Findlay as Olaf Guldmar was given many opportunities, which he made the most of. Robert Lowe did the heavy work satisfactorily, and Mary Stockwell, Emilia Melville, and Maribel Seymour were intelligently cast. Hearts of Oak 13-19.

The stock co. at the Grand Opera House appeared in The Mormon Wife 6-12, and the entire personnel of the co. was given an opportunity to show its ability, and did so creditably. Bertram Lytell, Lorimer Dean, Minna Phillips, Florence Noar, and Louis Morrison in serious roles were entertaining, and the comedy work was successfully furnished by Carrie Clarke Ward, Josephine Sherwood, and John Daly Murphy. The attendance was satisfactory and enthusiastic during the week.

A fair co. presenting The Sign of the Cross was the drawing card at the Crescent 6-12. The play has been seen here repeatedly and always draws well, for it has merit. George Flood as Marcus Superbus simply looked the part, and that was all. Adele Klaer as Mercia, with her talent and beauty, made a distinct hit, and the balance of the cast gave good support. The Burgomaster 13-19.

F. Gazelles French Drama, Comedy and Vaudeville co. opened 10 at the French Opera House, presenting La Boule to a crowded house. The work of the entire co. gave satisfaction and will be reviewed in a subsequent letter.

J. MARSHALL QUINTERO.

JERSEY CITY.

Sherlock Holmes was presented at the Academy of Music Nov. 7-12 to large houses. The play has novel light effects and is interesting from start to finish. Erroll Dunbar plays the part of the keen detective in such a manner as to receive more than once the approbation of the audience. He is a great actor and he knows how to handle the part. Kate Campbell as Agnes Faulkner was excellent and she created a most pleasing impression. J. Hay Cossar as James Larabee proved himself well suited to the part. Marie Gebhart was good as Madge Larabee. David Davis as Moriarty was fine, and his scene with Holmes in the latter's room was one of the best in the play. The small parts were well taken care of. The Ninety and Nine 14-19. Captain Barrington 21-26.

Florence Bindley in The Street Singer crowded the Bijou at every performance 7-12. Miss Bindley is a general favorite here and always draws well. She is a clever actress, an accomplished musician, and a fine dancer, all of which help to make her so attractive. She is perfectly at home on the stage, and while the present piece is not all that it should be for such a woman with the ability of Miss Bindley, yet it serves the purpose for which it was written—viz., to exploit the star. The play is handsomely staged, and a good co. appears in the different parts. Girls Will Be Girls 14-19. Tracked Around the World 21-26.

Colonel John W. Holmes, proprietor of the Bijou, has The Eternal City booked for New Year's week.

The Elks here secured the Kaltenborn String Quartette for the annual memorial services, Dec. 4.

The Theatrical Mechanical Association is growing. At the meeting 13 Manager James Wall and George Charters, of Thomas E. Shea's co., will be initiated.

Frank Mayne, of the Weber-Ziegfeld forces, was a visitor 10.

WALTER C. SMITH.

NEWARK.

Otis Skinner in The Harvester was the attraction at the Newark Nov. 7-12 and proved to be a popular engagement. Mr. Skinner was admirably supported by J. M. Colville as Francois, Lizzie Hudson Collier as Tolnette, Maud Durbin as Aline, Marion Abbott as Catherine, and George Clark as the seigneur. Checkers 14-19.

J. H. Stoddart in The Bonnie Brier Bush drew good audiences at the Empire 7-12. Not since Charles Warner appeared as Coupeau in Drink at the Empire has so consummate an artist or so commanding a figure been seen within a dramatic picture at this house as is Mr. Stoddart in the role of the old shepherd. Conceived in the right spirit, jocosely humorous and gayly animated is Reuben Fax's portrayal of the "Posty," and the others in the cast gave the star excellent support. Running for Office 14-19.

A Wife's Secret, presented by a competent co., drew excellent houses at Blaney's 7-12. The players engaged in the performance favorably impressed the audiences. Strong work was done by Daniel Jarrett as the drunken father, nor was the depiction of the rector by Hallett Thompson less worthy of note. Ogden Stevens showed commendable restraint in the role of the villain and did not, as is too often done in villainous parts, exaggerate the character. Lansing Rowan made a very acceptable heroine. Tracked Around the World 14-19.

Down by the Sea pleased large audiences at the Columbia 7-12. The players who deservedly received the most applause are Charles H. Sanders as Joel Haynes, a discerning old fisherman; Baby Burt as Edith Mulford, little daughter of the minister; Mortimer Martini as the hero, Rev. Henry Mulford, and Mona Carrington as the heroine. Flaming Arrow 14-19.

FREDERIC T. MARSH.

COLUMBUS.

The Royal Chef, designated as a musical cocktail appeared at the Great Southern Theatre for three performances Nov. 4, 5, and revealed that to a certain extent the sub-title chosen was apt and descriptive. The houses were good.

The Empire Theatre Stock co. 7-12 enacted The Cherry Pickers, presenting in this vehicle its two new members—Lillian Andrews, character woman, and Walter D. Greene, heavy. At no time has any accession to this organization bounded more surely and quickly into the favor of the audience on the first appearance than did each of these players. Their work was in both cases of the character pleasing to the clientele of this house. Among the others of the cast Wilton Taylor and Fay Courtenay gained the most prominence by their able delineations. However, all the others of the co. were competent in their roles.

At the High Street, When Women Love attracted large crowds 3-5, and its scenes were exciting to a degree and called forth frequent and tumultuous applause. The Smart Set, a colored troupe, filled an engagement at this house 7-9 and likewise proved a strong drawing card. This organization is a favorite at this theatre and each year brings capacity audiences.

At the Grand Opera House a musical farce entitled My Wife's Family surprised the local public here by being a really entertaining piece, although it came here unknown. Its attractiveness soon became general information and the audiences increased correspondingly.

J. CLARENCE SULLIVAN.

TORONTO.

The Princess Theatre had splendid audiences Nov. 7-12, when the Henry W. Savage English Grand Opera co. gave a week's performances of specially good grand opera in the vernacular in a thoroughly musicianly style. The productions included Carmen, Il Trovatore, Othello, Tannhauser, La Boheme, Lohengrin, I Pagliacci, Gertrude Rennyson, Miss Newman, Mr. Sheehan, Mr. Goff, and Mr. Boyle had the leading roles. The most popular opera in the repertoire proved to be Tannhauser, closely followed by Othello. The Prince of Pilsen 14-19.

Quinlan and Wall's Minstrels did good business at the Grand Opera House 7-9. Walter Brower and Fred J. Vincent, soloists, and the Trocadero Quartette were prominent in the best work done by the co., as were also Frank Cushman and Emile Lubers. Keller Mack's Blackville Band, and Nat Gill in ventriloquial specialties. Who Goes There 10-12.

The regular patrons of the Majestic were glad to applaud the efforts of the co. which presented A Working Girl's Wrongs 7-12, and which classes with the ordinary present day melodrama. Evelyn Forbes was conspicuous throughout for the able manner in which she enacted her part of Annie Lawrence, the villain's victim in the play. Tilly Olson 14-19.

Hope Morgan, the celebrated Canadian soprano, will give a concert in Massey Hall 14.

STANLEY McKEOWN BROWN.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Comedy broad and quaint divided the week at the Marquam Grand Oct. 31-5. The Office Boy is the best thing Frank Daniels has given us since The Idol's Eye, and won for him a brace of the biggest audiences this theatre has held this season. While the star monopolizes the limelight to an almost exclusive extent, opportunity was offered and accepted by Alfred Hickman, Solly Fisher, and Clara Jerome to receive the congratulations of the auditors for good work. By far the best comedy of the season was presented in The County Chairman. Theodore Roberts gave a most enjoyable and lovable characterization of the name part. George Thatcher shares honors with the principal. The business was good, but not nearly in accord with the play's worth. J. J. Jeffries in Davy Crockett 8. The Tenderfoot 10-12.

In Mizzoura received a capital rendition at the hands of the Columbia Theatre Stock co. 30-5. The Jim Radburn of Edgar Baume, Colonel Bollinger of William Dills, Travers of William Bernard, Fowler of Donald Bowles, Lizbeth of Catherine Countiss, and the Vernons, by Frederick Esmelton and Mary Bankson (two most acceptable additions to the organization), were worthy of particular note. Fine business averaged the week. The Girl I Left Behind Me opens 6.

The Fatal Wedding and The Heart of Chicago paid their third or fourth visit to Cordray's 30-5, and despite familiarity did not breed contempt on the part of melodrama lovers. The S. R. O. was in evidence at each opening. Mason and Mason in Fritz and Snitz open 6.

JOHN F. LOGAN.

TOLEDO.

The Billionaire, with Tom Seabrooke as John Doe, played to half a house at the Valentine Nov. 9. Maude Adams played The Little Minister to big business 10.

Tilly Olson, with Gertrude Swiggett in the name part, pleased the Lyceum patrons 3-5. The piece is along the ordinary lines, with a number of good points. The star was well supported by George Stout, A. W. Purcell, C. N. Lum, Hal Brown, Annie Alliston, Jessie Shaw, the Newsboys' Quartette, and Laurel Comedy Four. Paris by Night 6-12 was one of the cleverest musical offerings so far this season. Leslie and Dailey were the chief funmakers, and although they work on entirely different lines, both are finished comedians, and it is hard to tell which is the favorite. Leslie's line of slang talk certainly beats anything we have heard. Hugh Cameron was good as the Italian. Madge Lawrence and Margaret Messinger did the most work of the female contingent, while Maude Emery executed a neat toe dance. Business was good.

At Burt's The Child Wife, with Dolly Kemper in the lead, packed the house at every performance 3-5. Howard Hall's engagement in The Waif's Paradise filled out four days 6-9 to the biggest kind of business. Mr. Hall is a good actor and always gives a good performance.

C. M. EDSON.

CLEVELAND.

Mother Goose has held the boards of the Euclid Avenue Opera House for two weeks and played to big business. Lulu Glaser in A Madcap Princess 14-19.

Vaughan Glaser's Stock co. was seen in Mrs. Dane's Defense 7-12. Laura Nelson Hall's acting in the role of Mrs. Dane was all that could be desired. Louis Albion had a congenial role. Kate Jepson, a new member, will be quite an acquisition to the co. An Enemy to the King 14-19.

The Empire Opera co. closed its season with a pleasing rendition of the old, popular opera, The Bohemian Girl. The William Farnum Stock co. will make its initial appearance 14 in Romeo and Juliet. The organization is a strong one and should make good, including, as it does, William Farnum, Percy Haswell, Marshall Farnum, Forrest Robinson, Charles Mackay, Charles Herman, Clarence Montaine, Thomas Wendock, Priestly Morrison, George Staley, Louise Rial, Daisy Lovering, Louise Lewis, and Eva Allen.

When Women Love was the attraction at the Cleveland 7-12. Shadows of a Great City 14-19.

WILLIAM CRASTON.

OMAHA.

At the Boyd Theatre Eva Tanguay in The Sambo Girl played to a series of large and well pleased audiences 3-5. Miss Tanguay is bright, attractive, and original, and being backed by a good co. of comedians, the piece goes with a vim and sparkle that adds materially to the enjoyment of the performance. The Eternal City 6, 7 repeated the brilliant success that both the play and co. made last season, the attendance at the Sunday performances being most gratifying and far beyond expectations. Frederic de Belleville and Frank C. Bangs shared honors with the star. Manager Burgess announces Babes in Toyland 13-16. Woodland 17-19.

At the Krug Buster Brown played 3-5. Nat M. Wills opened a half week's engagement 6-8 to capacity, and this record is likely to be kept up to the closing night. The co. is large and well selected and encores are the rule. Underlined are Shore Acres 10-12, Ward and Vokes 13-16, Her First False Step 17-19.

NOTICE OF LAWSUIT!
To all Managers having knowledge of or transactions with this season's Melodramatic Sensation
HER MAD MARRIAGE.

An agreement of partnership having been made between the undersigned and the late Frank Allen, co-authors of this play, on June 7, 1903, under which the said play was later jointly undertaken and written, and the said Frank Allen having died on Dec. 5, 1903, leaving the undersigned the sole surviving partner of the said partnership owning this play, it has become necessary for the undersigned to commence suit against the managers presenting it to secure protection of his rights and royalties.

FURTHER, in answer to the many inquiries made in the profession as to the authorship of this remarkable play, the undersigned is now prepared as sole author, to negotiate for a new detective play, an even more remarkable melodrama with equally novel and sensational effects, on percentage royalty only.

Attorney: THOS D. ADAMS, 277 Broadway, New York.

VOL. I. NEW YORK, NOV. 19, 1904. No. 36

AFTER THE ELECTION.

Madame Slapoffski (nee Frances Neilson) will feature in Buffalo, for the first time, Mr. Harris' latest pathetic child-story song, entitled "Why Don't They Play with Me," and will undoubtedly create a sensation.

"I've Got My Fingers Crossed, You Can't Touch Me" will be featured by the wonderful boy soprano, Lores Grimm.

"Just a Gleam of Heaven in Her Eyes" is very successful with Laura Millard.

The colored slides to "Why Don't They Play with Me," Mr. Harris' new baby song, are now ready. Each slide a work of art and a distinct novelty.

"Down in the Vale of Shenandoah" is another "'Mid the Greenfields of Virginia," and is the biggest rustic ballad success to-day in America.

"Come, Take a Trip in My Airship" has set Chicago wild. Geo. Evans, the composer, who is playing an engagement at Hyde and Behman's Theatre in that city, has them singing the chorus a dozen times each night. The orchestras have also taken it up and it is all you can hear morning, noon and night.

Miss Lottie West Symonds, the Irish Countess, is meeting with tremendous success singing "Come, Take a Trip in My Airship," at the Howard Theatre, Boston.

"His Highness, the Bey," music by Jos. E. Howard, and book and lyrics by Hough and Adams, is being rehearsed at the La Salle Theatre, Chicago, where it will open on or about November 21, 1904. There are enough songs in this production to make a dozen musical comedies.

In answering these advertisements please mention THE MIRROR.

T. MAYO GEARY.

DOWN IN MUSIC ROW.

George Offerman, of the Morse Trio, will feature Theodore Morse's march ballad, "A Little Boy Called Taps" during the engagement of this popular act in the different circuits. Theodore Morse and Jack Drislane are also with the act.

Charles Kuhn, assisted by the Bufford Sisters, are making a big hit with George Evans and Ren Shields' "Come Take a Trip in My Airship."

The Berg Sisters, with Clark's Runaway Girls, are featuring "Seminole," and Rosalee, with the same company, is featuring "Back, Back, Back to Baltimore." Published by Shapiro, Remick and Company.

Strause and Young, refined duettists, with The Brigadiers company, are meeting with success singing Charles K. Harris' song, "The Girl of My Dreams," and Evans and Shields' "You're the Sweetest Flower that Grows in Tennessee."

George Davis, with Clark's Runaway Girls, is singing "Only the Beautiful Stars," with fine colored slides, and is also using a slide showing the chorus. He reports that the audience insists on joining in the chorus four or five times at each performance. This song is one of the biggest hits published by the T. B. Harms Company.

Eugene Ellsworth's Filipino intermesso, "Luzon," has met with instant favor among the prominent band and orchestra leaders, and its success seems assured.

Harry J. Breen has again joined hands with T. Mayo Geary, and they have just completed a clever song entitled "Come Back to the Land of Cotton."

Frank Fogarty and George Botsford have placed with their publishers, Shapiro, Rem'ck and Company, a novel song entitled "I've Taken a Fancy to Nancy." The melody is pleasing and no doubt will be a popular favorite.

J. W. McCue and J. J. Cahill, known in vaudeville as McCue and Cahill, have just returned from an extensive trip through the West, and will appear in the East for many weeks to come. McCue and Cahill state that their success with the Leo Feist songs has been phenomenal.

Master Henry Levis is meeting with deserved success singing "Sylvie," published by George W. Setchell, with offices in New York and Boston. "Sylvie" is being sung by many well-known singers.

Eugene Ellsworth's "On the Old New England Shore," a ballad of the coast of Maine, is meeting with success in the hands of many singers.

Jessie Mae Hall introduced "My Sun Burnt Lily" last week at the Columbia Theatre, Brooklyn. On election night Miss Hall responded to several encores and retired to her dressing-room while the audience applauded continually until the curtain arose on the next act, when she was compelled to acknowledge the prolonged applause before the play could proceed.

One of the biggest ballad hits to come from England to America in a long time is "Just Like the Ivy, I'll Cling to You," which is being sung by Harry Leighton, with Al G. Field's Minstrels. T. P. Harms Company are the agents for America.

James Aldrich Libbey reports that "When We Were Sweethearts, You and I," is the biggest ballad success he has found since "My Bessie's Wedding Day."

Lola Bigger, now with the American Burlesquers, is singing "Only the Beautiful Stars" with marked success. The song is supplied with eighteen beautifully colored slides, all of which are "night scenes," which make this song a novelty in its line.

Katherine Trayer, of Libbey and Trayer, continues to win merited applause for her clever rendition of the high class Southern ditty, "My Sun Burnt Lily." At the Madison Square Garden Concert Hall recently, at an entertainment given by the Shriners, two thousand were in attendance, who applauded this song vigorously.

Joseph W. Stern and Company's comic song success, "The Banana Man," is making a hit with Raymond Teal, who is to star shortly in a big production. Mr. Teal writes that the song is not exactly in his line, but it makes such a big hit that he has put it on permanently and considers it the best song of its kind this season.

Maud Beech, soprano soloist, has just closed after a successful season at the Fitchburg Opera House, having used an exclusive repertoire of Feist songs. A recent letter from her states that the greatest successes with her were "My Lady's Eyes," "Nyomo," and "My Little Zu-oo-oo-lu."

Ardell and Leslie report success with "Please Come and Play in My Yard."

"Game of Love" and "Nancy Clancy," by Maurice Levi and Edgar Smith, from Weber and Ziegfeld's Higgledy Piggledy, are now being played by nearly every orchestra in the United States, and wherever played encores are demanded time and time again. Charles K. Harris, the publisher, is receiving congratulatory letters from all the orchestra leaders upon the addition of this music to his extensive catalogue.

Holcombe, Curtis and Webb are scoring with Edwin S. Brill's songs, "Miss Katy Did" and "Ma Lady Moon." They are playing the Shea circuit.

"Beneath the Stars and Stripes," sung by Ira Rogers, and "Don't Come Back and Hang Around Ma Door," a coon song sung by Jeanette Gold, are special features in Saved from the Wreck. These popular songs are published by the Peerless Publishing Company.

Lena LaCouvier, the clever Western comedienne, attracted considerable attention by her excellent work at the Chicago Opera House recently, where she is singing "Karama," "Beautiful Home of Paradise," and "Billy," assisted by the boy singer, Rocco Vocco.

CHICAGO.

Second Fiddle and Common Sense Brackett—General Business Excellent.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.

Chicago is to have The Cingalee sooner than expected. It will follow Common Sense Brackett at the Studebaker next week. The bills this week:

Studebaker, Common Sense Brackett, with Richard Golden; Powers, William Collier in the Dictator; Grand, Kyrle Bellew in Raffles; Illinois, Louis Mann in The Second Fiddle, second and closing week; Garrick, Fantana, seventh week; McVickers, 'Way Down East; La Salle, The Jolly Baron, ninth and closing week; Great Northern, Pair with Hal Davis and Inez McCauley and Corbett; Columbus, Lilliputians; Bush Temple, Player Stock in A Social Highwayman; People's stock in Roanoke; Bijou, The Curse of Drink; Alhambra, Queen of the White Slaves; Academy, Alone in the World; Studebaker Music Hall, Arnold Daly in Candida.

The advance sale for Kyrle Bellew in Raffles began Thursday with a demand beyond expectations.

The subscription sale of seats for the Rejane season at the Grand Opera House, following Kyrle Bellew, will begin next Thursday.

Louis Mann has achieved at least one victory in the Second Fiddle at the Illinois: he has convinced the critics that he can act a serious part well if he chooses. His light and shade, humor and pathos, as the poor but prepossessing composer, Leopold, have been criticised as in too violent contrast. The transitions are too sudden, say the scribes. The audiences enjoy his humor immensely and have a funny feeling while contemplating his grief, not because he does not do it well but because he gets so sad and so quickly. The play is to blame. It is built of interesting material, but it is not a finished product, nor sufficiently clever to set forth the delightful character of the composer as it should be. Mr. Mann overcomes obstacles admirably and compels a great deal of applause and laughter. Through long scenes he wends his way brightly and faithfully. Then he disappears and the audience waits for him to come back. The star's support is acceptable, with the exception of Edward See's Parisian theatre manager, Loriot, which is excellent. Georgia Wells is natural, as Paula, but hardly seems the ideal woman who could capture a Parisian audience. Dorothy Revell looked the prima donna and acted the part with considerable facility. Business has been fair. It was said last week that Mr. Mann might revive The Consul.

Common Sense Brackett caused a ripple or two at the Studebaker. "Mild but pleasing," said Mr. Hubbard of the Tribune, and so it was. Most people, however, who hurry away out home in Chicago, rush dinner a bit and then jump a train for downtown to see a play, refuse to be entertained so easily. There must be more ginger in the performance, more effort on the part of the dramatist and producer to please, more incidents, surprises, wit, skill, and feeling than Common Sense Brackett has, even if it is a clean and sufficiently faithful, honest and homely picture of American life. Mr. Golden is thorough and clever as usual. He makes the Mainite prominent townsman live. Charles B. Hawkins' Sol. Saunders and Charles Carter's Hiram Boggs are two of the best character studies seen here in the flood of character comedy brought by Mrs. Wiggs, Bird Center, Weather Beater Benson, 'Way Down East, Ranson's Folly and several others coming for the first time and, like The Virginian, to return. Esther Lyon was good as Kate and Florence Rockwell was sufficiently excellent as the music teacher. Faye Cusick, daughter of a Chicago newspaper man, was a bright Cynthia. The village band made a hit with its burlesques.

Chicago's rising theatrical firm of Wingfield, Rowland and Clifford has secured another new house. The firm has leased the Martz at Tipton, Ind., now being completed, and will open it with a first-class attraction early in December. James Wingfield will book the Tipton from his office in the Grand Opera House, Chicago, along with the Schwartz at Waukegan and the Towle at Hammond. The Tipton house is a ground floor theatre with all modern improvements and a capacity of 1,000.

Amber Lawlord denies positively that Jo Leiter, the millionaire Chicagoan, is backing her enterprise of producing An American Woman next January and putting the play out with herself as star. Miss Lawlord says she is using her own money.

Jessie Bartlett Davis left the city Monday to make a short concert tour in the West.

M. B. Raymond was in Chicago last week en route East after visiting his Buster Brown company in the West. Mr. Raymond may star George Ali some day as the greatest living pantomimist.

John Odell and Grace Gilman, two Chicagoans, have joined The Legal Wreck company as heavy and soubrette. The tour began Nov. 8.

F. L. Clarke, Chicago representative of the Riverside Printing Company, adds his testimony to that of the other show printing houses that the present season seems unusually prosperous. According to collections he says it is one of the best seasons ever. E. R. Mackay, of Winterburn's, makes the same pleasing report.

Florence Guise has resigned from A Broken Heart company and joined Hal Godfrey's company, which will play The Liar and Very Bad Boy over an extensive vaudeville route in the East. The tour began last Saturday here.

The midnight election performance of McFadden's Flats, announced by Manager Fred Eberts, of the Great Northern, was abandoned after a good sale and money refunded. The political news was all one way, and it was thought the crowd downtown was losing interest. The election matinee and night performance drew well.

The La Salle management is convinced that the forthcoming successor of The Jolly Baron will win great popularity. The unknowns who wrote the book and lyrics, William Hough and Frank Adams, two students of the University of Chicago, seemed to have produced a satire of more than ordinary worth, and Jo Howard has apparently given it the music it requires. The title, His Highness the Bey, only partly indicates that the comedy is Turkish. The story is based on troubles in the Balkans which make it necessary to cut off an official head.

Ward and Vokes come to the Great Northern next week for two weeks.

F. F. Proctor was in Chicago last week, and rumors were started that he came to inspect Hyde and Behman's (formerly Iroquois). Mr. Proctor visited at least one stock theatre.

The Illinois Theatre's injunction against the city's closing the house for not widening certain aisles and making a few other changes according to the new law, will not reach argument for a week.

Business Manager Sam Gerson, of the Garrick, denies positively that Fantana is to leave in two weeks for New York and make room for Ada Rehan as the holiday attraction. Mr. Gerson says Fantana is so successful that it will remain till next March if the Virginian booking of one month, beginning Jan. 9, can be changed. Otherwise Fantana will go to New York in January.

Elizabeth Shober, manager of the Bush Temple Theater, entertained the audience at the Bush on Election night with a vaudeville bill after the regular performance of Too Much Johnson. Stage Director Fred Powers read election returns and made a hit—with the Republicans. Sidney Pilsen, Mr. Powers's assistant, recited James Whitcomb Riley's Me and Jim and Mark Twain's Preacher in a way that delighted the audience. For an encore he gave an imitation of John W. Kelly. Harry Werner sang "Let Me Go Back," from the Royal Chef, and was recalled several times. Miss Canay, of the Players' company, gave several recitations. The programme concluded with an original comedietta entitled The Sculptor's Dream, with Morris McHugh as the sculptor, Emma Lou Giffen, soubrette of the Players, as the statue, and George Loane, light comedian of the Bush, as the wooden Indian. Mr. McHugh's popularity as the comedian of the Players caused an unexpected ovation which kept him bowing several moments when he first came on in the little comedy. Laughter followed him to the finish. Miss Giffin was pretty and appealing as the statue and her song was encored. George Loane had an effective make-up and successfully landed a number of laugh producers.

Lucille La Verne, of Ezra Kendall's Weather Beaten Benson company, has received an offer to star in a play called Samantha. This is one result of her excellent Mrs. Piffles.

Edith Marion Smith has joined the Stanley Stock to play ingenues, juveniles and leads.

BOSTON.

Mr. Mansfield and Miss Rehan Begin Engagements—Business Generally Good—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BOSTON, Nov. 14.

There is no question whatever about the "standard drama" having the call in Boston this week when one considers the great following that Richard Mansfield and Ada Rehan drew at the opening of their engagement tonight. With two such stars in town it is only natural that the other houses should feel a slight falling off.

Richard Mansfield opened his engagement at the Colonial this evening with the only new play that he brings to Boston this year, Ivan the Terrible. There was a large and brilliant audience in attendance this evening, and much enthusiasm over the reception of the star. It is evident that the return to a varied repertoire is a popular move so far as attendance goes, for there is a lively sale for the different evenings of the fortnight. Beau Brummel and The Merchant of Venice will also be given this week, and Richard III., A Parisian Romance and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde will be added to the list before the fortnight ends.

Ada Rehan made her first appearance as a star upon the stage of the Majestic and the capacity was tested to witness her Katherine in Taming of the Shrew, just as was the case at the big Boston last Spring. Her supporting company is different in many respects, for it is new. Charles Richman who divides the honors with her, and William Redmond, Mrs. Thomas Barry, Oliver D. Byron and others as well known are in the cast. The School for Scandal and The Country Girl will also be revived by Miss Rehan in the course of the engagement.

The Fortune Teller opened a week at the Globe to-night with a cast that was certainly effective so far as the presentation was concerned. One of the added features was Elsie Janis, who gave a series of imitations with great cleverness.

The Dancing Girl gave the players of the stock company at the Castle Square a chance to show versatility by the change from a Willard to a Sothern success. Lillian Kemble was especially good in the character originally played here by Virginia Harned, and Howell Hansell was also effective in the Sothern role. Leonora Bradley has had a cordial welcome back.

Escaped from Sing Sing is a melodrama that always quickens the pulses of the West End clientelle of the Boudoin Square. The piece has been given here before with Dominick Murray in the leads, but the present production introduces Butler Haviland in the protean character and he does well. The stock company's full strength is utilized.

There can be no question whatever about the warmth of reception for The Secret of Polichinelle at the Park, for all the critics praised the comedy for its clear and sparkling lines and excellent company. The patronage has not been what the piece deserved. W. H. Thompson, Drina De Wolfe, W. J. Ferguson and Ida Darling share the honors. This is the last week here.

William Gillette has entered upon the last half of his engagement in Boston, as have Denman Thompson and Henrietta Crosman. Only a fortnight more remains for The Admirable Crichton in this city.

Miss Crosman's stay in Sweet Kitty Bellairs is altogether too short at the Tremont, but it is the limit before the return of Mr. Savage's Parsifal to the local stage.

It is remarkable the way that folks pour in to the Boston at every performance to see Denman Thompson in The Old Homestead. Mr. Thompson's own work as Josh Whitcomb is true to the locality and always effective.

Mary Sanders took her leave of her old admirers at the Castle Square 12 amid scenes of demonstrative affection rarely seen in a Boston theatre. The house was packed, for all the clientele wished to give her a send-off to wherever she may go. After The Professor's Love Story she was presented with many flowers. Then Lindsay Morison, now the sole survivor of that first stock company at the Castle Square, appeared and presented her with a purse of gold as the gift of the patrons of the house. From the company came a traveling bag with her monogram in gold, and from the stage hands was a huge alpenstock of twining flowers. In response to the presentations Miss Sanders made a very neat speech and told of her regret at leaving so many true friends after a stay of seven years at one theatre. With John Craig, Lillian Lawrence, and Mary Sanders all gone, the Castle Square will not seem the same to many, for all were favorites.

There was another demonstration the same evening, for at the Majestic Wright Lorimer took his leave of Boston with The Shepherd King. The last week of the engagement the house was packed at every performance, and the final audience was the largest of them all.

At least 77 of the players in the Symphony Orchestra have had their resignations accepted by the Musical Union, and it now looks as if the question of labor troubles could never come up to vex this sterling concert organization.

May Robson has cancelled all her vaudeville engagements after her week at Music Hall, so as to go on to New York and begin her rehearsals as a leading member of Lou Fields's company.

Mrs. G. H. Gilbert's Boston engagement has been transferred to the Hollis from the Park, where it was first booked.

John F. Webber, formerly a favorite at the Castle Square, is seriously ill at his home in Northampton.

There is trouble throughout the one-night stands of Massachusetts, where the State police are carrying out the new law in regard to theatres. The use of town halls for the presentation of plays raises questions about protection, and rumor has it that Leominster, Taunton, Marlboro, North Adams, Palmer, Northampton, Springfield, Westfield, Holyoke and Pittsfield are among the places that are awaiting with interest the determination of certain phases in connection with the somewhat drastic measure passed by the last Legislature.

JAY BENTON.

ST. LOUIS.

Closing Days of the Great Fair—Doings in the Theatres.

(Special to The Mirror.)

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.

In two weeks we are to have President Roosevelt, Vice-President-elect Fairbanks, National Chairman Cortelyou, their wives, many Cabinet and other officers, their wives, and still other notables with us to give éclat to the closing hours of the greatest World's Fair the world has ever seen. All this is going to happen on Nov. 26.

The big routine of the World's Fair is carried forward daily with precision. Just now the chrysanthemum has the floral center of the stage, the show being truly marvelous. Our little brown friends the Japanese, of whom there are thousands in town, so many in fact that we do not wonder where the Mikado gets all his troops to fight the Russians, have the inner rail in the chrysanthemum competition. If I haven't reported it before I may as well do so now and say that the Germans, the Japanese and the Canadians, in the order named, have made the best displays here.

Surprisingly well the theatres are keeping up their gait. All the houses continue to play to beyond capacity, meaning by this the constant sale of seats for far dates ahead. Mr. Hayes' Delmar Louisiana has closed at Music Hall and the road tour begins at once, Detroit being the first date.

But the most agitating question here is: Are Sam and Lee Shubert trying to sell the new Garrick Theatre which they are building in St. Louis? It is said that the brothers have offered the house to other interests. No announcement of opening attractions is forthcoming, and the enterprise appears to be halting. The true status of the case will, it is believed, develop in New York in a few days.

Election week had no bad effect on the theatres. The houses on Tuesday night were crowded as usual and Lew Dockstader made much out of the situation at the Century. Dockstader had a fine show, Neil O'Brien as a funmaker and Manuel Romaine as a singer delighting large audiences.

Ben Hur will close at the Olympic on Saturday, Nov. 26.

At the Imperial there's no visible let-up in the popularity either of The Darling of the Gods, Blanche Bates, her company or the manner of the presentation of the Belasco-Luther idyll of old Japan. J. Henry Benrimo, a prominent member of the cast, is well liked for his masterly presentation of the dual part of the father of Yo-San and Kato the fisherman. As the former at the Feast of the Thousand Welcomes he is particularly effective. The company and the play have had no rival in the first choice of all World's Fair patrons. The engagement will end on Dec. 3 after a run of eighteen weeks, terminating one of the most successful engagements ever played in the West. Manager Russell states that the popular-priced season at the Imperial starts on Dec. 4, with A Hot Old Time, followed by Patrice, Sherlock Holmes, Shadows of a Great City, Happy Hooligan, Darkest Russia, etc. Blanche Bates will do Hedda Gabler matinee of Nov. 17, and on Thanksgiving Day My Aunt's Advice and Madame Butterfly.

Ezra Kendall, "that rare good fellow," according to the dignified Globe-Democrat, "who has the gift of making cold hearts warm and warm hearts warmer," made a big hit with Weather-beaten Benson at the Century Sunday night. The play is by the actor, who cheerfully claims for it no indulgence on that account. It deals with affairs in Oklahoma during the stirring strip opening period, and introduces a number of characters which do not seem unnatural to us who have viewed them in naturibus, as we say in the classics. Boston, you know, took kindly to Weatherbeaten Benson and that should count for something also in this relation. Much good material was discernible in the company, and Kendall is not one of those actors who strains himself in leaving the vaudeville circuit for the regular stage.

Henry Clay Blaney's melodrama Across the Pacific started in well at Havlin's yesterday. Havlin's is nothing if not a good Sunday house, and it matters little what is offered so that it's melodrama of the Blaney stripe. The scenic effects are a trifle lurid in spots, but that is again what is demanded by the Havlin patronage.

Nat. M. Wills in A Son of Rest is making his second visit to town at the Grand. Nat, like Kendall, is also a legitimate graduate from the vaudeville stage and, again like Kendall, has the stamina to go beyond a twenty-minute sketch.

Just now The Midnight Express is dashing across the stage at the Crawford, having the right of way all week and beginning yesterday with a matinee.

The police fund benefit at Delmar Garden Sunday afternoon much increased the exchequer of the Police Relief Association.

Der Loewe des Tages (The Lion of the Day) was last night's Heinemann and Welb offering in the German cyclus of plays at the Olympic. Director Heinemann was at his best, his sad-faced humor convulsing the house. It is noted that a great many theatre patrons not familiar with German are coming to these Sunday night performances, attracted thither by the scholarly and capable way in which all the offerings of these gifted Germans are put on.

Burton Holmes has to go to the Y. M. C. A. Hall this season to give his illustrated lectures, the Odeon being no longer available.

Edith Taliaferro made an instant hit in Weaterbeaten Benson last night. The young woman carries as much responsibility for the success of the piece on her tiny shoulders as does the former Vinegar Buyer himself. Her sister Mabel is favorably remembered locally for her work in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch.

The Odeon Kiralfy Spectacle will run until Dec. 6, when Walter Clarke Bellows will launch his stock company. His leading man is Byron Douglas.

Harry Corson Clarke and a company of twenty-three people and two cars of scenery passed through here Nov. 9 from New York to San Antonio, Tex., to play a season of ten weeks in stock.

G. E. Raymond, manager of Pain's Last Days of Pompeii, was a Fair visitor on the ninth. He reports the best season the Pain spectacle ever had. He contemplates the revival of an immense spectacle late this season.

PHILADELPHIA.

Auditorium Changes Name and Managers—Business Excellent.

(Special to The Mirror.)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.

William J. Gilmore, owner of the Auditorium, has leased his theatre to Charles Elias and Augustus Koenig, who opened the house this evening after changing the title from the Auditorium to the Casino, with Elias, Koenig and Lederer, proprietors and managers, the preliminary attraction being Edward E. Rice's The Merry Shop Girls (formerly called Mr. Wix of Wickham). This will remain the programme until the completion of George W. Lederer's musical stock company, which will furnish the amusement for the rest of the season. The prices range from 25 cents to $1.

Cecilia Loftus was at the Broad Street Theatre last week with The Serio-Comic Governess, and attracted fair attention. The best thing about the play is the title and her imitations of noted actresses. The author, Israel Zangwill, spent the week here trying to improve the action and climax. William H. Crane inaugurated a two weeks' engagement here to-night with Business Is Business and received a good welcome. William Gillette in The Admirable Crichton Nov. 28.

The Rogers Brothers in Paris are in their second week at the Chestnut Street Opera House. Wright Lorimer in The Shepherd King will follow Nov. 28.

Grace Van Studdiford in The Red Feather began a two weeks' term this evening at the Chestnut Street Theatre and attracted a good house. Piff, Paff, Pouf comes Nov. 28.

Margaret Anglin was to have opened at the Garrick Theatre last Monday night, Nov. 7. The theatre remained closed and the opening was postponed until the following evening, when The Eternal Feminine was produced amid the excitement attending the results of the Presidential election. The audience did not take the plot seriously, and laughter will kill any sentimental play. Margaret Anglin is a favorite and a talented actress who deserves a better vehicle. Annie Russell with Brother Jaques followed at the Garrick to-night to fill in a two weeks' gap before the engagement of Richard Mansfield Nov. 28.

At the Walnut Street Theatre, Lawrence D'Orsay in The Earl of Pawtucket opened to-night for a two weeks' stay to medium sized house. Checkers follows Nov. 28.

Billy Van in The Errand Boy at the Grand Opera House was greeted at his opening this evening with one of the biggest houses of the season. The business here this season is something phenomenal and speaks well for the management and the various combinations. The Rays in Down the Pike Nov. 21. Morrison's Faust 28.

The Vacant Chair, Theodore Kremer's latest thriller, was received with applause to-night at the Park Theatre, where it attracted a big house. Creston Clarke follows Nov. 21. Adelaide Thurston 28.

Happy Hooligan holds the week at the Girard Avenue Theatre, opening to a crowded house. George Melville, Crimmins and Gore, Mamie Conway, Electric Comedy Four and James E. Leonard are worthy of special mention. Eugenie Blair in Iris comes Nov. 21; David Harum, 28; Nanette Comstock in The Crisis, Dec. 5.

Blaney's Arch Street Theatre presents Joseph Santley, "the boy actor," in From Rags to Riches, with realistic stage effects and good supporting company. Opening large. From its opening night this house, through excellent management, has been a paying institution. A Working Girl's Wrongs, Nov. 21; More to Be Pitied than Scorned, 28.

Too Proud to Beg, one of Lincoln J. Carter's throbbers, interested a big audience at Hart's New Kensington Theatre this evening, and proved just the style of plot that pleases the "mill" district. Deserted at the Altar, Nov. 21; A Girl of the Streets, with Lillian Mortimer, Nov. 28.

A Prisoner of War is the card at the People's Theatre, with prospects of excellent business. The Child Wife, Nov. 21; A Wife's Secret, 28.

Forepaugh's Theatre Stock company, in an elaborate revival of My Partner, deserves particular mention. The cast includes George W. Barbier, Arthur Maitland, Edmund Elton, Edwin Middleton, Caroline Franklin. It is a reminder of the palmy days of stock companies, and the management deserves credit for many excellent productions during the season. Out of the Fold, Nov. 21.

Darcy and Speck's Stock company at the Standard Theatre is doing Resurrection this week with fair success. Jim Bludsoe, Nov. 21.

Saake's German Bijou Theatre, with its stock company, continues in favor. William Tell with The Gold Uncle are specialties for the week.

Dumont's Minstrels at the Eleventh Street Opera House, have a new burlesque on the Russian-Jap War, entitled Admiral Rojcsvensky, the Man that Sees Things. Four Mignani Brothers and Crazy for Trading Stamps. Patronage always large.

King Edward's Grenadier Guards, direct from the St. Louis Exhibition, will give two farewell concerts Nov. 18; in the afternoon at the Chestnut Street Opera House and in the evening at the Academy of Music. They sail for home Nov. 19.

An Elephant on Their Hands, with Mabelle Hale, was billed last week to appear with Columbus, a big-tusked beast at the Bon Ton Theatre. The stage hands led the animal into the alley on one side of the theatre, tore away partitions and cleared a passageway. The elephant became restive and the combined efforts of his trainer and stage hands could not get him into the theatre, so his first performance here in vaudeville was postponed.

The new Hotel Bellevue-Stratford, corner of Broad and Walnut streets, to which every citizen in the Quaker City points with pride, opened its immense ball-room (which contains a stage and private boxes and has a seating capacity of 1,200) this afternoon with a concert by the Kneisel Quartette.

Madame Gadski will give a recital here Nov. 15, being the first of a series of four concerts. This ball-room will see a great many fashionable society events during the season that formerly rented the Academy of Music.

Ysaye will be the soloist, matinee Nov. 18, and evening, Nov 19, with the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Academy of Music. Melba, with the same orchestra, appears at the Academy afternoon of Nov. 19. There is certainly a surfeit of musical attractions here this week.

Professor Leopold Engelke, founder of the Musical Association of Philadelphia, and a musician of international reputation, died in this city Nov. 9 of heart disease, aged seventy-eight years. He retired from active work eighteen years ago.

WASHINGTON.

Busy Bees' Club House Burned—Attractions at the Theatres.

(Special to The Mirror.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.

Cecilia Loftus is strongly welcomed in The Serio-Comic Governess at the National to-night by a large and pleased audience. The support includes H. Reeves Smith, Herbert Standing, George S. Spencer, William J. Butler, Emmett Shackelford, Julia Dean, Eva Vincent, and Kate Pattison Selton. Thanksgiving week's offering is The Girl from Kay's.

Dunstan Farnum convincingly presents The Virginian as an all-round admirable quality. The Columbia Theatre audience of large proportions warmly applaud the star, play and interpreting company headed by Helen Holmes. Margaret Anglin in The Eternal Feminine follows.

To-night a specially noteworthy presentation of Sherlock Holmes, with Errol Dunbar in the title-role, is given at the Lafayette Square. The company is an excellent one and the work throughout enthuses a crowded house. Last week's presentation of Iris by Eugenie Blair, who commenced her season here, was a record-breaking success of crowded attendance. The star achieved a noteworthy success. Charles Ross and Mabel Fenton open next week in Twirly Whirly.

A Wife's Secret, one of Spencer and Aborn's attractive presentations, is at the Academy of Music. Lansing Rowan is the clever star of the production and is strongly supported by Hallett Thompson, Ogden Stevens, Daniel Jarrett, J. Hoover Wright, Harry Barton, W. J. Ryley, Helen Gurney, Nadine Winston, and Dollie Ford. Next underline is Happy Hooligan.

The Club House of the Busy Bees, at Four-Mile Run, Va., of theatrical prominence and reminiscence, in the last twenty years owned by George W. Denham, of last season's Babes in Toyland company; Walter Allen, of Henry Miller's company; James T. Galloway, of Shore Acres, and Morgan A. Sherwood, of the National Theatre here, was totally destroyed by fire last Sunday week with insurance of no value attached. The loss cannot be estimated in figures. The many relics lost, comprising rare prints, playbills, autographed photographs, water color and charcoal sketches by Joseph Jefferson and others, cannot be replaced. Yesterday Henry Miller, Walter Allen and other members of the Joseph Entangled company had arranged to run down from New York for a day of recreation and a programme of interest had been prepared for their reception.

President Roosevelt, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, Ethel and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Miss Morton, daughter of the Secretary of the Navy; Lieutenant Fortescue, recently returned from the Philippines, occupied a box Saturday night at the Columbia Theatre and witnessed a performance of The County Chairman.

Harry S. Alward, business-manager of Cecilia Loftus' company, has material for an interesting book of experience while traveling in principal cities of South Africa last Summer, booking a tour for Lillian Blauvelt, the American soprano. His tour embraced a journey of 19,500 miles.

The Washington Symphony Orchestra gives the first of the series of the five course subscription concerts at the Lafayette Square under Reginald De Koven's direction next Friday afternoon at 4.30. Madame Etta De Montjan will be the soloist.

Rays Back Again — Melodramas, Musical Travesty and Stock Do Good Business.

(Special to The Mirror.)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14.

The Harry Davis Musical Travesty company, at the Avenue, began its second week this afternoon, offering Hurly-Burly. Judging from the large and pleased audiences of last week, it looks as if this new enterprise of Manager Davis will be a permanent success.

An annual favorite at the Empire is A Little Outcast, with Anne Blancke as the star. To-night's large audience seemed to enjoy it as much as upon its preceding visits. Walter Edwards in The Sign of the Four follows.

Florence Bindley in The Street Singer is at the Gayety, and a large audience is present to-night. 'Way Down East, which opened this beautiful new house two weeks ago, and held the stage for this period, played before capacity audiences during its entire engagement. Next week, Siberia.

The Duquesne has a crowded house to-night to see the Rays in Down the Pike, and will, no doubt, duplicate its enormous business of five weeks ago at this house. The Rays are always one of the strongest drawing attractions in this city. Running for Office will run next.

Superba never fails to draw filled houses at the Bijou every time it comes, and such evidently will be the case this week. Next week, Shadows of a Great City.

At the Alvin, the Harry Davis stock company is seen in Charley's Aunt—Frederick Paulding playing the title-role of the bogus aunt. The others play their roles creditably, and the play is splendidly mounted. Robert Emmet will be next week's play.

Maude Adams in The Little Minister is at the Nixon, and will be followed by Nat. C. Goodwin in The Usurper.

Duquesne Garden will open its season of ice skating on next Wednesday evening.

Mme. Melba and her company will give a concert at Carnegie Music Hall Nov. 28.

Joseph W. Zimmerman, treasurer of the Duquesne Garden for several seasons, has been appointed assistant treasurer of the Gayety.

William Ingersoll and Eva Taylor, great favorites here, will make their debut together in a one-act comedy, Imaginary Madness, at the Grand next week in the vaudeville bill.

ALBERT S. L. HEWES.

BALTIMORE.

Melodramas Popular — Melba, Walsh and Lorrimer this Week.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.

Blanche Walsh is seen at Ford's Grand Opera House this week in Resurrection. Miss Walsh scored a decided success in her realistic portrayal of the character of Maslova. Cecilia Loftus in The Serio-Comic Governess will follow.

Wright Lorrimer's production of The Shepherd King holds the stage of the Academy of Music, where it is booked for two weeks.

The Strange Adventures of Miss Brown is the play presented at Chase's Theatre by the De Witt Stock company. Robert T. Haines gives a clever portrayal of the character of Captain Charles Courtney, and Adelaide Keim appears advantageously as Angela Brightwell. A clever character sketch is given by Percy Winter as Mr. Hibberton. Others appearing are Harry Burkhardt, John T. Craven, Helene Lackaye, Lizzie Goode, John Waldron, Florence Nash, George Fisher, and Edna Bothner. The play is well staged and costumed. Next week The Henrietta.

The Brothers Byrne's New Eight Bells is seen at the Holliday Street Theatre. The underline is Why Girls Leave Home.

Madame Melba will be heard at the Lyric Nov. 21, assisted by Ellison Van Hoose, tenor; Charles Gilbert, baritone; Signorina Ada Sassoli, the young Italian harpist; Mlle. Llewella Davies, and C. K. North, flute soloists.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the Washington Symphony Orchestra, which will be heard at the Lyric for the first time Nov. 19. Reginald De Koven, the director, has arranged a very interesting programme for the occasion.

HAROLD RUTLEDGE.

CINCINNATI.

The Two Orphans—Other Attractions to Good Business.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CINCINNATI, Nov. 14.

The so-called all star cast of The Two Orphans is at the Grand to-night, opening to a large and enthusiastic audience. Grace George, Clara Morris, Mrs. Le Moyne, Elita Proctor Otis, Sarah Truax, Louis James, James O'Neil, J. E. Dodson and Jameson Lee Finney were all received with great applause and gave a highly satisfactory performance of this famous play. Viola Allen in A Winter's Tale follows.

The Forepaugh company at Robinson's accomplished another revival of an old-time favorite yesterday in Hazel Kirke. Lavinia Shannon and Jack Farrell were very acceptable, as usual, in the leading roles. Zaza is announced for Thanksgiving week.

The German company gave Schiller's Wilhelm Tell at the Grand last night with Manager Otto Ernst Schmidt in the title role. The play was well cast and admirably acted.

Under Southern Skies is again at the Walnut, where its annual engagements are becoming one of the features of the season. A strong company adds much to the success of the performance.

William Single Clifford, long a favorite here in vaudeville, makes his local debut in the legitimate this week's at Heuck's in a musical comedy drama. How He Won Her. His success with yesterday's audiences was unquestionable.

The Lyceum has Patrice in Driven from Home, which seems to be as well liked at that house as upon the occasion of its first visits there.

Nat C. Goodwin had a fine week at the Grand last week in his new comedy, The Usurper, which caught the fancy alike of the local critics and the public. It furnishes him a typical Goodwin role and he makes the most of every opportunity.

H. A. SUTTON.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave the first concert of the season in Carnegie Hall Nov. 3 to a large, enthusiastic audience. Willy Hess, the new concertmeister, made a favorable impression.

Vladimir De Pachmann, the Russian pianist, was heard in pianoforte recital in Mendelssohn Hall last Tuesday afternoon. His interpretation of Chopin particularly pleased his audience. Another recital was given in the same place yesterday afternoon.

The first concert of the sixty-third season of the Philharmonic Society, a public rehearsal, so called, was given in Carnegie Hall Friday afternoon. The conductor was Gustav F. K. Ogel, of Frankfort, and the soloist Josef Hofmann. The conductor's work was scholarly.

The popular concert singer, David Bispham, was heard in song recital in Mendelssohn Hall Wednesday afternoon. The programme was Schubert's "Cycle Die Schonenüllerin."

King Edward's Grenadier Guards Band gave two enjoyable concerts at Carnegie Hall on Sunday.

Marcella Sembrich gave her annual song recital in Carnegie Hall Saturday afternoon. Her voice was in perfect condition and the large audience applauded warmly.

ACTORS' CHURCH ALLIANCE NEWS.

National (and Local) Headquarters, Manhattan Theatre Building, Broadway and Thirty-third Street.

Harry Leighton will be the speaker at the fiftieth service of the New York Chapter, to be held at the Manhattan Theatre next Sunday afternoon, Nov. 20, at four o'clock. His subject will be, "Breaking the Barriers of Unjust Prejudice." Music will be furnished by the vested choir of St. Chrysostom's Chapel under the direction of Alfred G. McGrath. The service will be staged and will be conducted by the dean of chaplains, the Rev. Thomas H. Sill. All members of the profession are cordially invited to attend.

A meeting of the New York Chapter will be held Thursday evening, Nov. 17, at 8 o'clock, at St. Chrysostom's Chapel, Thirty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue. All members are earnestly invited to attend, as business of vital importance to the Alliance is to be considered. This Chapter meeting will be held in place of the usual monthly reception.

The Soiree Varie held by the National Council at the Hotel Astor last Thursday afternoon was a success. The College Room was crowded with members and friends, and quite a goodly sum was realized for the work of the Alliance. Grace Esterbrook Ainsworth opened the programme with a piano solo, after which the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer made a short address on the aims and objects of the Alliance, which, he said, stood above all things else for church unity. Up to the time of the organization of the society the church had been united mainly upon one point—namely, its opposition to the theatre, but it had since discovered that it lacked one important quality which the stage possessed, interest, and its ministers were now learning from the dramatic profession to make their sermons interesting. Soon there will be little to choose between what the church has to offer in ultimate result and what the stage can teach. It is evident there is a quickening of public taste, and that it is setting against the trivial and toward the real things of life. Dr. Slicer concluded by advocating a more general adherence to the gospel of sunshine, observing that the only thing in life worth multiplying is its joy. The address was followed by two numbers rendered by the Viardot Quartette, consisting of Lillie M. Welker, Susan I. Brooke, Helena Wade, and Jule Layton. William S. Phasey gave two selections on the violoncello, after which Fred S. Abbott recited "The Kitchen Clock" with fine effect. Maud Lambert sang sweetly and Agnes Christensen gave two selections on the violin. The programme closed with an illustrated lecture on "The Isle of Jersey," by Madame Ahier-Chesley, which was exceedingly interesting and greatly enjoyed. In fact, the whole programme was very successful in every way. Great credit is due Mrs. Bessie Taylor Bennington, who as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee organized the affair, and among her associates may be mentioned Bertha Livingston, Mrs. Hudson Liston, Jennie Wilder, and Mrs. Harry Leighton, of the Flower Committee. Mrs. J. Alexander Brown and Joseph B. Arthur sold tickets. Aimee Abbott and Frances Florida arranged the programme, and Eliza B. Harris acted as treasurer.

The Rev. Walter E. Bentley, National Secretary and Organizer, will preach next Sunday, Nov. 20, in Washington, D. C., as follows: At the Church of the Good Shepherd, 408 H street, N. E., at 11 A.M., and at Trinity Church, Third and C streets, N. W., at 8 P.M. Both sermons will be in the interests of the Alliance, and on Tuesday evening, Nov. 22, the Washington Chapter will be organized in Trinity Hall, Third and C streets.

The Providence (R. I.) Chapter will hold a service next Sunday evening, Nov. 20, in All Saints' Church, Westminster street, and the rector, Arthur M. Aucock, will preach the sermon, and the secretary of the Chapter, Percy B. Gibson, will deliver an address. Claude H. Cooper, of the Checkers company, and Edward Fuller, of the Providence Journal, have recently joined the Chapter.

The Philadelphia Chapter held a reception last Tuesday afternoon at The Clinton, Tenth street near Spruce. There was a large attendance and an interesting programme of music and recitations was rendered. The President, the Rev. Dr. Floyd Tomkins, made an address and was followed by the Rev. Walter E. Bentley, who told the story of the Alliance and especially the present efforts and success of the play contest committee. Mrs. Mason, aided by the local secretary, Newton M. Potts, received the members and guests and a large number of new members were added to the Chapter. In the evening Mr. Bentley addressed the Brotherhood of St. Andrew on the Alliance in the parish house of Holy Trinity Church, and great interest was manifested.

Special monthly services are being arranged by the St. Louis Chapter in the interests of the Alliance, under the direction of the secretary, the Rev. Crozier G. Adams. Several of the city clergy have promised their co-operation.

The play contest committee of the National Council have decided to close the contest on Dec. 31. New plays are being received daily at Headquarters.

OBITUARY.

Susan Mason Remick, who for nearly half a century was the wardrobe mistress at the old Boston Museum, died at the Home for Aged Women in Boston on Nov. 6, at the age of eight-two years. Miss Remick, who was always known in the theatre as Susan Mason, was the daughter of a theatrical boarding-house keeper and when a girl she went on as an extra in many plays at the Museum. At the same time she assisted the wardrobe mistress and finally became the wardrobe mistress herself. She occupied that position from 1846 until 1895, when the stock company ceased to exist, and during that period she was associated with practically all of the famous people of the American stage. She was a woman of strong religious principles and of most genial personality. These qualities endeared her to all the players at the Museum, and despite the humble position that she occupied she was always most highly respected and esteemed. Annie Clark, the noted old Museum star, bequeathed a considerable sum of money to Miss Remick and when the old wardrobe mistress found her occupation gone, through the disbanding of the stock company, she used this money, together with her savings, to pay her way into the Home for Aged Women. She was always extremely charitable and was prominent in several church organizations in Boston.

Fred J. Loudin, the noted negro singer and manager, died at his home in Ravenna, O., on Nov. 3, aged sixty-two years. Mr. Loudin was born in Charlestown, O., and in his youth he was a printer. He possessed a wonderful bass voice and after studying music for a time he joined the Fisk Jubilee Singers. Eventually he became the proprietor of the organization and changed the name to the Loudin Jubilee Singers. Two years ago he became ill and was obliged to retire from the company. He is survived by his wife and a sister.

Charles Senyard, known familiarly as "Captain" Senyard, formerly the manager of the Elks Theatre at Pine Bluff, Ark., died at his home in that city on Nov. 1. He was for many years the chief of the fire department in Pine Bluff, and later as a theatrical manager he won many friends in and out of the profession and amassed a considerable fortune. He was long a member of the Elks, and his remains were buried by that order. His wife and two children survive him.

William J. Fitzgerald, who last season played Grimesy in A Bunch of Keys, died at the home of his mother in Portsmouth, O., on Nov. 4, after a long illness. He is survived by his mother, two sisters and a brother.

Joseph McHugh, an actor who appeared last season with the Robert Edeson company, died last week at St. John's Hospital in this city. The remains were buried by the Actors' Fund in the Fund Plot in the Cemetery of the Evergreens.

Louis Eugene Trembley, known professionally as Valere Remy, a member of The Yankee Consul company, died suddenly of apoplexy at his lodgings in this city on Nov. 13. He was twenty-eight years old and leaves a wife and one child.

Leopold Engelke, once noted in Europe and America as a violin virtuoso, died suddenly of heart disease in Philadelphia on Nov. 8. He was seventy-five years of age.

E. G. Thompson, the father of Lizzie Van (Mrs. James Horton), died in Brooklyn on Nov. 9. The remains were buried at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson.

Mrs. Prescott, the mother-in-law of J. Alexander Brown, died in this city on Nov. 12.

CUES.

Percy Plunkett has decided to postpone the New York opening of his sketch, My Wife's Mother, until Spring, as he has been engaged to originate a comedy part in Arthur C. Alston's new play, Shadows on the Hearth, which is now in rehearsal.

Hamlin, Mitchell and Fields have decided to name their new theatre at Forty-fifth Street and Broadway the Comedy, and intend opening it next September with Pixley and Herbert's The Enchanted Isle.

John F. Webber is still quite ill with typhoid fever at his home in Northampton, Mass.

"E. H.," writing to THE MIRROR from Boston, says of the recent appearance at Malden of Erroll Dunbar in Sherlock Holmes: "Mr. Dunbar brought forward and emphasized the human appeal of Sherlock Holmes, lifting the performance from the external plane of mere action to one of psychological interest. In the more intense scenes he displayed a reserve power and depth of suggestion which should place him among the very foremost of American actors."

Henry Taylor, of The Sho-Gun company, is playing the role of Tee-To Komura during the absence of William C. Weedon, who is ill. Mr. Taylor is admirably suited to the role in every respect, and his impersonation has won the decided approval of audiences.

J. Frank Burke, who is playing the lead in More to Be Pitied than Scorned, will retire from that organization on Nov. 26.

Henry W. Savage brought forward his third prima donna of the Parsifal company, Florence Wickham, on last Friday evening, at the New York Theatre. Miss Wickham's impersonation of Kundry was, except for a lack of force at times, altogether excellent.

Christian de Voss, late of the Royal Netherlands Opera House in Amsterdam, made his American debut in the role of Parsifal at the New York Theatre last Thursday evening. He is one of the three leading tenors in Henry W. Savage's Parsifal company and will appear regularly in the role through the season.

Reginald Roberts has returned after two years in Australia and rejoined H. W. Savage's English grand opera company.

Forrest Flood, the well-known actor, who for the past two seasons has been a member of Blanche Walsh's company, is seriously ill with a bronchial malady at the Presbyterian Hospital in this city.

Lorena Atwood, recently the leading woman of the Belasco Stock company in San Francisco, was engaged by George Tyler last week to play the role of Mrs. Vidal in the Kyrle Bellew production of Raffles. Miss Atwood made her first appearance in the role last night (Monday) in Chicago.

General Lew Wallace, the author of "Ben Hur," "The Fair God," "The Prince of India" and other novels, is seriously ill at his home at Crawfordsville, Ind. He is seventy-seven years old, but until very lately he had been in the best of health.

J. James Kennedy and Helene Leslie Warde, the leading man and the leading woman of the Ruby Stock company, were married at Rockville, Conn., on Nov. 10. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. George, of St. John's Episcopal Church, and was witnessed by the members of the company.

Under the direction of Mrs. Jesse Cromelin the Homestead Dramatic Club gave a performance of A Delicate Question, Nov. 2, at the New Auditorium in Newark. The following members of the club appeared: Mrs. J. Vollenhover Workum, Amelia Heusler, Florence Allwood, Frank A. Gillen, John A. McKenna, Eugene Arthur, Andrew B. Law, Alfred Howland, Fred Decker and John Green.

The Victor Herbert Orchestra drew another large audience to the Majestic Theatre Sunday evening. Isaac Munson, contralto, furnished the solo numbers.

Loudon G. Charlton announces a concert by Madame Gadski and David Bispham, assisted by Marguerite Hall and Kelley Cole, at Carnegie Hall next Thursday afternoon, when they will give the first public presentation of a Shakespearean Song Cycle by Mrs. Grace Wassall, a young American composer.

IN BROOKLYN THEATRES.

At the Majestic this week the veteran player, J. H. Stoddart, is seen in The Bonnie Brier Bush. Mr. Stoddart is seen as Lachlan Campbell. Reuben Fax as the postman contributes comedy and a good company assists.

At the Broadway Raymond Hitchcock in The Yankee Consul is the attraction. The company includes Eva Davenport, Rose Botti, Agnes Caine Brown, Sally McNeil, Lily Brink, Albert Parr, William Danforth, Joseph Ratliff and J. E. Hazzard.

The Missourians, the new play under the management of Mrs. H. C. DeMille, in which Theodore Hamilton appears in the principal part, is seen at the Grand Opera House. Leo. Doherty, who plays the role of Colonel Callaway with great success, is a Brooklynite and well known in dramatic circles.

Thomas E. Shea having finished a successful week at the Grand moves with his full list of plays to the Folly for his annual engagement, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Edna May Spooner returns to the Bijou in the rural drama, Up York State. Miss Spooner in the character of a rustic beauty and Augustus Phillips as Darius Green her country lover, on whose farm the play opens, will delight the patrons of this popular house. Hal Clarendon as Allen Wordford, the rich man of the village, is the villain; Cora E. Morlan is Liz Williams, while Emma De Costro plays Amy Robinson. Other parts are in capable hands, while the picnic and school scenes are special features.

Woman Against Woman is offered this week by the Columbia Stock Company. Jessaline Rodgers is the heroine who is deeply wronged by the woman in love with the hero, while Richard Buhler plays the husband and Will R. Walling has the part of the villain. Jessie Mae Hall, the new soubrette who has won popularity in Brooklyn, has a congenial role, and her singing and dancing specialty will surely make a hit this week. The piece is handsomely staged. Tuesday souvenir matinee portraits are presented to the women.

Cecil Spooner repeats at the Amphion this week her success of some time ago as Lady Ursula in The Adventures of Lady Ursula. The stage pictures are an attraction, as the period is 1760, and the locale England. Mrs. Spooner has spared no expense in having the costumes correct. The fencing scene will give Cecil an opportunity to display her ability, and the comedy in the piece will keep the audience in good humor. Harold Kennedy as Mr. Castleton is given full scope and a chance to sing, just what he likes. Ben F. Wilson plays Sir George Sylvester, and Jessie McAllister has the role of Miss Dorothy Fenton. All the others are well cast and give good support.

Blue Jeans is presented at Payton's, with both Corse Payton and Etta Reed Payton supported by the entire company and an additional force employed to give realism to the scenes requiring crowds. Louis Leon Hall as Perry Boscom and Lee Sterrett as Jacob Tutewiler have parts in which they excel. Florence Gear as Nell Tutewiler fits the part perfectly. The buzz saw scene is one of the big features.

Percy G. Williams' Deserted at the Altar is the attraction at the Park. The company includes the author, Pierce Kingsley; Charles W. Young, John Smiley, Nettie Thebaud, Ethel Milton, Jewell Darrell, Adele Carlton and Master Samuel Liebert.

The Lyceum Stock company at Phillips' Lyceum present a four-act comedy drama entitled Friends. Emma Bell and William C. Holden are well supported by company and the Lyceum Quartet.

Kidnapped in New York with Barney Gilmore, is at the Novelty. The abduction of Baby Clark is the story of the play, and Mr. Gilmore plays the part of Jack Dooley, a detective.

At the Unique the performance opens with The Queen of the Nile and concludes with the Shoemaker's Revenge. Good vaudeville is sandwiched between.

VINCENT R. KIRK.

ALICE KAUSER.

The business established by Miss Kauser ten years ago is too well known and firmly established to need much comment. Its sweeping success has given impetus to the play brokerage business—a term she originated—and a number of imitators have come into the field. Her form of contracts, her methods of rendering accounts, her ways of advertising, her arrangements of lists of plays and her weekly letters to her clients have all been faithfully copied. This imitation has only affirmed her hold upon her patrons and clients.

The scope of her business is to cover the sale or leasing of plays, and no extraneous business is ever given house-room in her office. The business has been divided into three departments.

First—That of untried plays. The list of authors includes every playwright of note.

Second—This department comprises the metropolitan successes that are leased for the road. These plays are to be had either with complete scenic outfit, or without. Of twenty-three of these plays on the road this season, twenty-one are to be credited to negotiations conducted in this office—ninety per cent. of the total.

Finally comes the stock department which, through its magnitude and the infinitesimal details connected with its many demands, necessities the utmost care and vigilance. Miss Kauser was the originator of the stock play brokerage business, and she practically controls this field. The important play producers have appointed her their exclusive agent, and, in the few instances where this is not the case, Miss Kauser is always a direct agent. No lists are ever issued from her office that contain plays for which negotiations have to be carried on through an intermediary. Direct negotiations with the owners are the only methods that prevail.

As an example of the extraordinary business done in this office, there were one hundred and eighty plays produced through all three departments during the month of October. The corps of assistants comprises eight people; the number of manuscripts and parts exceeds two hundred thousand copies; the number of letters written and received daily averages two hundred, the number of telegrams thirty, and the number of telephone messages fifty.

TOM MAGUIRE RECOVERED.

Tom Maguire, who underwent a remarkable operation for the removal of his tongue, which had a cancerous growth, has entirely recovered from the shock that followed the loss of his organ of speech, and declares that he is again ready to enter the theatrical field and to serve any manager who may wish to secure his services. Since his recovery Mr. Maguire has been studying a ventriloquial method of speaking and can now make himself easily understood. He is at his little farm at Lake Mahopac, but will jump at a moment's notice to any part of the country to which he may be summoned. Mr. Maguire's long and varied experience should be of great value to some manager who is trying to master the details of the business.

Few people realize the time necessary to get out a special holiday number like the Christmas DRAMATIC MIRROR. Preparation begins early, and the forms for the special features must be printed some time before the paper is on the news stands. If you intend to patronize the advertising columns this fact should spur you to get in your order and copy at once. * *

CAUTION TO NOVICES.

THE MIRROR from time to time receives letters from novices anxious to go on the stage, asking for information as to this or that person named who has begun negotiations with these correspondents on the assurance that for this or that consideration the novice or novices can be successfully placed in the theatre. It is but a few weeks ago that a young man operating on like lines was sent to prison for a term of four years for the deliberate robbery of a woman whose acquaintance he had formed on the pretense that he could place her favorably on the stage.

The theatre has grown to be an institution with vast ramifications, employing thousands in its various departments, and like all other large aggregations of enterprise it must necessarily develop a tribe of hangers-on, or persons who pretend to have associations with it, the sole business of whom is to decoy and defraud persons with ambitions for the stage. The number of the "stage struck" is always large. It is now larger than ever, because the theatre in its larger operations exercises a fascination for a very considerable percentage of those who frequent it. And it is among these persons that the dishonest work, with absolutely no basis for their pretense that they can find a place on the stage for any one that promises a money reward. The victims of these pretenders must be numerous, but, like most other victims of their own ambition or vanity, as a rule they keep secret the fact that they have been swindled, unless the case is so flagrant and so serious in its results that confession and exposure are necessary.

THE MIRROR would warn persons ambitious to enter the life of the theatre, and particularly the multitude of young persons who may the more easily fall under the spell of the fakir or swindler because of their youth, against taking the word of any casually encountered and self-styled "agent" or "manager" who pretends that he can find a place on the stage for any untried applicant—for a consideration. The swindler in cases of the class suggested here is some one whose name is never recognized in theatrical circles and whose specious pretensions are usually accepted by the novice with stage ambitions without suspicion or question.

A good rule for young men or women anxious to go on the stage to follow is to wholly ignore the advances of any person not well known to them by reputation as honestly associated with the theatre, and to prosecute their own ambitions before agents or managers of prominence and standing. It is much better to find long discouragement from authoritative sources than it is to be fooled into false expectation and be swindled by persons who lie in wait for the unwary.

THE CHRISTMAS MIRROR.

PREPARATIONS are under way for the holiday number of THE MIRROR, which will be published in conjunction with the regular number for the week of its issue.

THE MIRROR this year will revert to its plan for a ten-cent number, followed for several years, but interrupted last year for a more elaborate publication in commemoration of its twenty-fifth anniversary.

The forthcoming holiday number, aside from the departments that make the regular number so valuable to the profession of the theatre and all interested in the stage, will have many special features of exceptional interest, will be handsomely illustrated and will be bound in one of the most attractive covers ever designed for this journal, which was the original holiday publication in this country and for a quarter of a century has been noted the world over for its special features relating to the stage.

The large number of the regular subscribers to THE MIRROR, as well as the many thousands who buy it on unnumbered newsstands scattered over this continent and in foreign countries, will secure this number at no increase over the regular weekly rate charged for it.

When the circulation of THE MIRROR is considered—it is the largest and widest ever enjoyed by a dramatic newspaper—and note is taken of the special value the holiday number will have because it will be long preserved by its multitude of readers, its desirability as an advertising medium, both from a professional viewpoint and for the purposes of general announcement, will be appreciated. That value will be further impressed when it is known that the rates for advertising in the Holiday MIRROR, like the price to be charged for that number, will be the same as those that regularly prevail.

THE RULERS OF OUR STAGE.

Collier's, Nov. 12.

The American drama is controlled almost wholly by a group of some half a dozen men. Daniel Frohman, not technically part of the syndicate, is part of it essentially, and he is the only one of the aggregation that is looked upon as a person so cultivated and "literary" that he is fitted occasionally to promulgate critical ideas in print. These exhalations of intellect as least avoid the danger of soaring beyond the vision of the ordinary reader. In his latest magazine treatise on the art of which his brother is the king, Mr. Frohman lays down with the calmness of omnipotence what "must be" in drama. "The story and its complications need not be new, though their treatment must be fresh, and every year requires a more novel, though not necessarily outré, setting than the last. The love story must be clear and distinct in the mind of the dramatist, and he must find an obstacle in its course. This obstacle, reasonably, convincingly, ingeniously, he must remove." Good-by to Romeo and Juliet, of course, to every tragedy, to the best of Hauptmann and Sudermann, even to The Admirable Crichton, which, by the way, would have horrified the syndicate had it not borne the name of Barrie. There is no cause for surprise in Mr. Frohman's opinion that Hamlet is "no play." "The characters, which were undoubtedly preconceived character studies, are strung together, hanging limply from an old-fashioned peg, jostling against one another like stray individuals in a crowd and exposing their inmost hearts without rhyme or reason. Hamlet himself is a purposeless hero, antagonizing the audience with his vacillations and cowardice and uncertainty." We do not pretend to know what "preconceived character studies" are, but are comforted to have Mr. Frohman speak a good word for Laertes. Truly, there you have the embryo for a part that, worked up into the whole drama, would exactly suit a Frohman star and make a Frohman play. "What," exclaims Mr. Frohman, "would be a modern manager's impression today if confronted by the manuscript of a play like Hamlet, if proffered for its theme and its purely technical construction?" What, indeed, if the manager were an American and a member of the syndicate. Mr. Frohman observes that in Tess, Tanqueray and Fedora, Cleopatra and Patrie "the action is coldly classical." Sardou, nevertheless, seems to be his high-water mark. Ranging over the whole field of dramatic art, Mr. Frohman ends with an inspiring list of masterpieces, selected at random, he says, but all "sound, sane and convincing in theme, plot, character and treatment." The Lady of Lyons is made remarkable for "character study"—the quality in which Hamlet, if we understand Mr. Frohman, is such a failure. The Wife is on the list "as a splendid variant" of The Banker's Daughter theme. No wonder American legends include the tale that when Miss Maude Adams wished to play Romeo and Juliet Mr. Charles Frohman ordered a scenario prepared for his perusal.

THE LONDON STAGE.

Reminiscences of Leno—The Walls of Jericho Succeeds—New Shaw Play—Notes.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

MIRROR BUREAU,
LONDON, Nov. 5.

As in each case when I have mailed you during the last three weeks, it is again my painful duty to give you an account of some important theatrical or music hall personage who has just died. About three weeks ago it was the plucky ex-Gaiety manager and fine journalist, John Hollingshead; a fortnight ago it was the veteran theatrical and variety manager and founder of the modern music hall, Charles Morton, and now it is the funniest low comedian that was to be found on the theatrical or variety stage—poor little Dan Leno. The death of Hollingshead, was was 76, and of Morton who was 86, could, of course, cause no great surprise, but little Leno was only half the age of the last-named manager—that is, 43.

MIRROR readers have been informed by me several times during the last two years of Leno's intermittent illness and of his mental breakdown from time to time, and so I doubt not that when the cable flashed the sad news to America last Monday, those who knew or had read anything about Dan Leno were not surprised so much as shocked at the news of his end, which came very suddenly, after all. The loss to the stage is great. For over twenty years Leno has been, both in theatres and music halls, the leading spirit of honest, harmless mirth. I have known distinguished men, Members of Parliament, scientists, political economists, and even clergymen, to vow that when they were unwell or depressed they have gone to hear poor little Dan Leno, and have come away refreshed as though by the best sea air. In the Drury Lane pantomimes he was the idol of the children, as well as of their parents, so fill of simple quaintness was he, and even up to a few weeks ago when the failure of his vast humorous powers painfully began to be apparent, he could move a huge music hall audience to screams of laughter by his face and figure alone. I know that in America he failed to make a very pronounced success, perhaps because his kind of humor seemed to you to be very local or Londony. But all over the British Isles he was the idol of the entertainment seeking public.

Perhaps I knew more about Dan Leno (whose real name was George Galvin) than any other journalist did, for it was I who discovered him clog-dancing for a paltry wage in the minor music halls, and trying ever and anon to sing a song—an experiment concerning which he was long terribly nervous. It was I who, perceiving his great possibilities, then wrote of him a criticism that caused all the leading theatrical and variety managers to rush to those minor halls and seek to engage him. The late George Conquest was the first of this eager group to secure Leno, and he used him for two pantomimes at the Old Surrey Theatre in the Blackfriars Road. That was just over twenty years ago. During the last Surrey engagement the late Augustus Harris, who had (on seeing my notice) raced with Conquest for Leno, snapped him up for Drury Lane. At the "Lane" Leno put in sixteen years' pantomime work, starting with a joint salary for himself and his "serio-comic" singing and dancing wife, Lydia Reynolds, of £22 10s. per week. This wife, who survives him, soon retired. Dan's last salary at Old Drury was £250 per week!

Like, too many others in the theatrical and vaudeville profession, Leno's career was cut short by that reckless "Bohemianism"—as it is called—to which the good-natured, gentle and most benevolent little fellow was lured by seasoned "spongers," who flattered him for anything they could get. His physical powers, never of a robust kind, gave way under this strain of so-called "good fellowship," and, anon, alas! his active and brilliant brain followed suit. For some time after his first period of restraint he bobbed up again apparently as blithe as ever, but those of us who knew him and had endeavored to stop these reckless courses of his (as I had done over and over again), could see that "the King's Jester," as he loved to be called after his singing before Royalty, was doomed. Speaking from a thoroughly intimate knowledge of him in his private as well as his professional life, I can (thank God!) say of Dan Leno that I never knew, not only a cleverer all-round man, but also there has not been in my time a more lovable or more charitable fellow on this earth. Before his malady he never possessed the slightest shadow of a shade of professional jealousy. Many a poor struggling man and woman (professional or otherwise) will miss dear, droll, little Dan. Tomorrow (Sunday) more than one popular preacher will discourse concerning his honest infectious mirth, and I predict that his funeral next Tuesday will draw a huge crowd of mourners of all classes. May he rest in peace!

And now to less mournful matters. I am glad to inform you that—in things theatrical—especially as to the three new productions concerned, we have had what the racing fraternity would call "a good week."

The first new play was Alfred Sutro's comedy, The Walls of Jericho, produced by Manager Arthur Bourchier at the Garrick on Monday. On this occasion Bourchier gave the whole proceeds to the recently formed fund for the sufferers from the Russian Baltic fleet's dastardly attack on a few English fishermen. In order to prevent any diminishing of the night's receipts, even we dramatic critics paid for our seats. I am glad to record a success for Bourchier, whose two recent productions—namely, W. S. Gilbert's eccentric mixture, The Fairy's Dilemma and Henry Arthur Jones' not much more satisfying "comedy," entitled The Chevaleer, did not achieve much in the way of runs, considering their eminent playwriting parentage.

The Walls of Jericho is a brilliant, if occasionally unequal, satire against the Bridge playing, and other gambling and suicidal fads now prevalent in the so-called "Smart set" of society with the biggest of S's. Bourchier as a long-suffering, but sympathetic and ever-optimistic and humorous husband, and B.'s clever wife, Violet Vanbrugh, as a some time foolish, gadding and gambling wife with a neglected child, have fine acting parts. The play abounds with artistic bits and hits, and the end is very effective. When the long-jarring and separated couple are at length brought together (the foolish wife now seeing the error of her ways), one character says to the "good genius" of the play: "I suppose we have to thank you for all this." "No!" devoutly exclaims the repentant wife and mother, "We have to thank God!" Curtain.

Mr. and Mrs. Bourchier are strongly supported, especially by Muriel Beaumont, June Van Buskirk, Elfrida Clements, and Kate Sergeantson, and Sydney Valentine, O. B. Clarence and Junius Brutus Booth, who is, I take it, a descendant of the same Roman-named actor who was the father of your great tragedian, Edwin Booth, who, I am glad to say, I often saw act.

The other principal new production of the week was John Bull's Other Island. This play, or rather four-act essay, might really be called "George Bernard Shaw's Other Joke," for the irrepressible G. B. S. proved in it that he was as irresponsible as ever, although even fuller of wit and waggery than of yore; and that, as you know, is saying a great deal.

This new Shawesque mixture appeared at one moment to treat the "Other Island" (meaning "Good Ould Oireland") seriously, and at another moment to "guy" it. Indeed, although you would scarcely credit it, G. B. S. even seemed, at times, to approach the verge of the pathetic. But then, lo! he "whopped in a wheeze" (as we say in the modern English language) that eftsoon destroyed the momentary illusion. In short, John Bull's Other Island was a three-and-a-half hours' study of all sorts of Irish characters and of one English character, which would seem to have been intended by the bold and brilliant Bernard to satirize the whole of that race, which some Irish love to describe (especially in stage plays) as the "Hated Saxon." I gather that this was G. B. S.'s intention, not from the play itself, but from a subsequent interview which he graciously vouchsafed to a Daily News man, who had evidently been much worried mentally by Shaw's play. Foolish man to worry! He should have done as I always do with Shaw, accept his witticisms gratefully, pour passer le temps, and even at times to quote them in defense of G. B. S.'s humor, when some bull dog dares to doubt it. One should never take Shaw seriously about anything, especially as to most of his plays. John Bull's Other Island, which is being given at a few Court Theatre matinees, is splendidly cast, the chief scorers being Granville Barker, A. B. George, John L. and Wilfred Shine, Nigel Playfair, Graham Browne, Ellen O'Malley, Agnes Thomas, Percival Stevens, and Louis Calvert, who played the one Englishman.

The other new play of the week was Miss Mischief, a comical, though conventional musical comedy, written by Reginald Bacchus and composed by Dr. Osmond Carr. When I tell you that the heroine disguises herself as her own maid in order to discover if a certain more or less eligible youth loves her and is worthy to be loved, it will remind you of many plays which you have seen or read from She Stoops to Conquer downward. Still Miss Mischief is a merry mixture.

The O. P. Club's banquet to Lionel Brough on his attaining his jubilee on the stage was a great success last Sunday. Another German play season opens at the Royal to-morrow. The matinee, in aid of the veteran, Charles Morton's widow, will be given at the Palace Theatre next Tuesday. On the same afternoon (as long ago arranged) Beerbohm Tree will, at His Majesty's, give a matinee of Trilby, in aid of the Actors' Benevolent Fund.

I learn that Lewis Waller has just decided to bring His Majesty's Servant to America. Waller will, of course, be welcome, but his bringing of this American made play with him must remind many of the old English phrase as to carrying coals to Newcastle. GAWAIN.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

H. M., Toronto, Can.: 1. Jean de Reszke is teaching in Paris. 2. You will see by THE MIRROR's correspondence columns where the Campanari Concert company is each week. They were in Rockford, Ill., last week. 3. Plançon is in New York.

F. J. W., Chicago, Ill.: Why Smith Left Home was produced in New York at the Madison Square Theatre Sept. 2, 1899, after having been done in London and other American cities. Maclyn Arbuckle was the Smith in New York.

HELEN K., Grand Rapids, Mich.: Through the courtesy of Colonel Milliken we learn that 'Osler Joe was written by Mrs. Jospehine Clarke and produced ten times by the Howard Stock in 1902.

MARY C., New Orleans, La.: Augustin Daly was born in Plymouth, N. C., July, 1838, and died in June, 1899. He became a theatrical manager Aug. 16, 1869, when he opened the first Fifth Avenue Theatre. He opened Daly's Theatre on Sept. 17, 1879.

F. M., Syracuse, N. Y.: 1. Human Hearts closed after very poor business in Washington, D. C., Nov. 6, 1897, without coming to New York. 2. Two Little Sailor Boys was played at the Third Avenue Theatre first and then rewritten and produced at the Academy of Music.

Arthur W., Louisville, Ky.: The Little Minister, with Maude Adams as star, was put on first in Washington, D. C., the week of Sept. 13, 1897. The supporting company included Robert Edeson, William H. Thompson, Eugene Jepson, Guy Standing, George Fawcett, Frederick Spencer, Wallace Jackson, F. Payton Cooper, Norman Campbell, Wilfred Buckland, Thomas Valentine, Margaret Gordon, Jessie Mackey, Jane Ten Eyck, and Edna Bonnie.

THE USHER

The rapidity with which the new Hippodrome at Forty-third Street and Sixth Avenue is now rising is a matter for amazement. The characteristic sightliness of the structure is already suggested, and that it will be a very notable addition to metropolitan amusement buildings is evident to the most casual observer.

Work was stopped for weeks on this structure, it is remembered, because of what was alleged to have been a violation of the building ordinances in its substructure. It was very significant at the time to persons who know of certain methods that are adopted by those who control theatres and amusements in and out of this town that reports hinting of the "dangerous" character of this new building, as projected, and insinuations that it never would be finished, were industriously circulated.

It is understood that the injunction, or other process, that was secured against the construction of the Hippodrome was based on something akin to a "John Doe" proceeding, by which the real movers in the matter were enabled to hide from view; but the proceeding fell flat, although it delayed the new building, and the order stopping the work was dissolved quickly when the matter came before the proper authority.

It was easily shown that the substrucure of the Hippodrome was on solid rock, instead of the rumored "quicksand," and that every provision of the law regarding theatre and amusement buildings in New York had been complied with. Even the new requirements as to building theatres, formulated, it has been said, at the instance of persons who control a majority of the existing theatres in New York with a view of preventing any "outsider" from building a theatre, and requiring such areas of space giving upon streets as to practically make it necessary for a builder to secure a block and erect his house in the center of it, offer no embarrassment to this Hippodrome, which will have a street on each of three of its four sides, and for safety will not even be excelled by Madison Square Garden.

Apropos of the stoppage of work on the Hippodrome—an action that now seems really to have been based on the sinister "influence" that has before been felt in the field of amusements—a story is told. This story may be wholly true, or it may be but partly true, but it smacks strongly of absolute verity.

As the story goes, a prominent member of the Theatrical Trust was found one morning at the headquarters of the Department of Buildings, seeking audience with the man in authority there. It was soon after work on the Hippodrome had been stopped by the proceeding which has been vacated. For the purpose of this relation merely the visitor may be called Mr. Trust Philanthropist and the man in authority in the Building Department may simply be called Mr. Official. The former may be called a philanthropist because he appears to have been on a philanthropic mission. A conversation something like this—in effect like this—is said to have occurred:

Trust Philanthropist: "I see work on the so-called Hippodrome has been stopped."

Mr. Official: "Yes."

Philanthropist: "Well, of course you know who I am, and I want to suggest that if New York wants a Hippodrome—if it really needs a Hippodrome—why, we can give one to the city."

Official: "Why, one might think that you—you and your partners—were interested in embarrassing the building of the new Hippodrome!"

Philanthropist: "Oh, no! We don't care about it. But I might as well tell you—as probably you don't know it—that the men behind this so-called Hippodrome are small fry. They don't amount to anything. They run a little show down at Coney Island in the Summer, but they haven't any money, and we don't like to see New York buncoed."

Official: "You are very kind to New York, I must say. But I might as well tell you—as probably you don't know it—that the real men behind this Hippodrome—the most prominent of whom is a personal acquaintance of mine—have got money enough to buy up every theatre in this city and country that you and your partners and friends control. More than that, they are able, if they should take a notion to buy up all your theatres, to keep them closed indefinitely."

It is not said how the Trust Philanthropist achieved his exit, but it is reliably reported that Mr. Official knew whereof he spoke, and that the chief backer of the Hippodrome enterprise, which probably will be extended to the erection of buildings in three or four other first-class cities, is one of the very big men in Wall Street who on occasion might show millions enough to finance a trust of his own.

The eating of peanuts long has been an accessory enjoyment of the circus for many persons, chiefly, perhaps, because the selling of peanuts long has been an incidental industry at the circus.

Time was, and in this metropolis, too, if the elders are to be believed, when peanuts, especially to the denizens of the gallery, were to many necessary as an accompaniment to acting. In the old days, when Forrest and his histronic compeers played, there no doubt were peanuts in evidence at least between the acts, but the peanut habit for the most part has disappeared from metropolitan playhouses, or at least from playhouses of the better sort, as something not seemly.

That peanut-eating in theatres of smaller places—even in suburban places—is still practiced, however, is evident from the following taken from the programme of the Colonial Theatre, Peekskill:

Eating of peanuts in a theatre is nearly as much an annoyance and nuisance as the fellow who creates a disturbance, because that nuisance can at once be located and stopped by the ejection of the offending party. Any patron annoyed by peanut-eaters or in any other way during a performance will confer a great favor on the management and save himself annoyance for the rest of the evening if he will at once make complaint to door tender or head usher.

The manager of the Colonial, F. S. Cunningham, is to be commended for this warning against peanut-eating, supplemented as it is by a promise of suppressive action. This is a habit that may well be monopolized by the circus.

MISS WYCHERLY IN YEATS PLAYS.

Margaret Wycherly has completed arrangements for her tour this season in the plays of the Irish poet, William Butler Yeats. Her manager will be Bayard Veiller, who for the past two years has been associated with James K. Hackett's enterprises. Her season will begin with a matinee performance at Carnegie Lyceum, under the auspices of the Wellesley Alumni Association, on Nov. 19. Upon that occasion she will present The Land of Heart's Desire, The Hour Glass, and Kathleen Ni Hoolihan. Two days later a special matinee performance will be given by the company at Wellesley College, and on Nov. 22 the regular tour will begin with a performance at Chickering Hall in Boston.

Although the plays of Yeats have won success in England and Ireland, they have been presented here only upon special occasions, and usually by amateurs. Miss Wycherly's venture is therefore interesting. Mr. Yeats has sanctioned the enterprise, and has provided Miss Wycherly with the original prompt books and designs for scenery and costumes. The productions will practically be duplicates of those of the Irish National Theatre in Dublin. Mr. Yeats is now at work on a new poetic drama, entitled Dierdree, which Miss Wycherly will produce during the season. She will also present a new version of The King's Threshold, and will make an elaborate production of Yeats' more ambitious play, The Countess Cathleen.

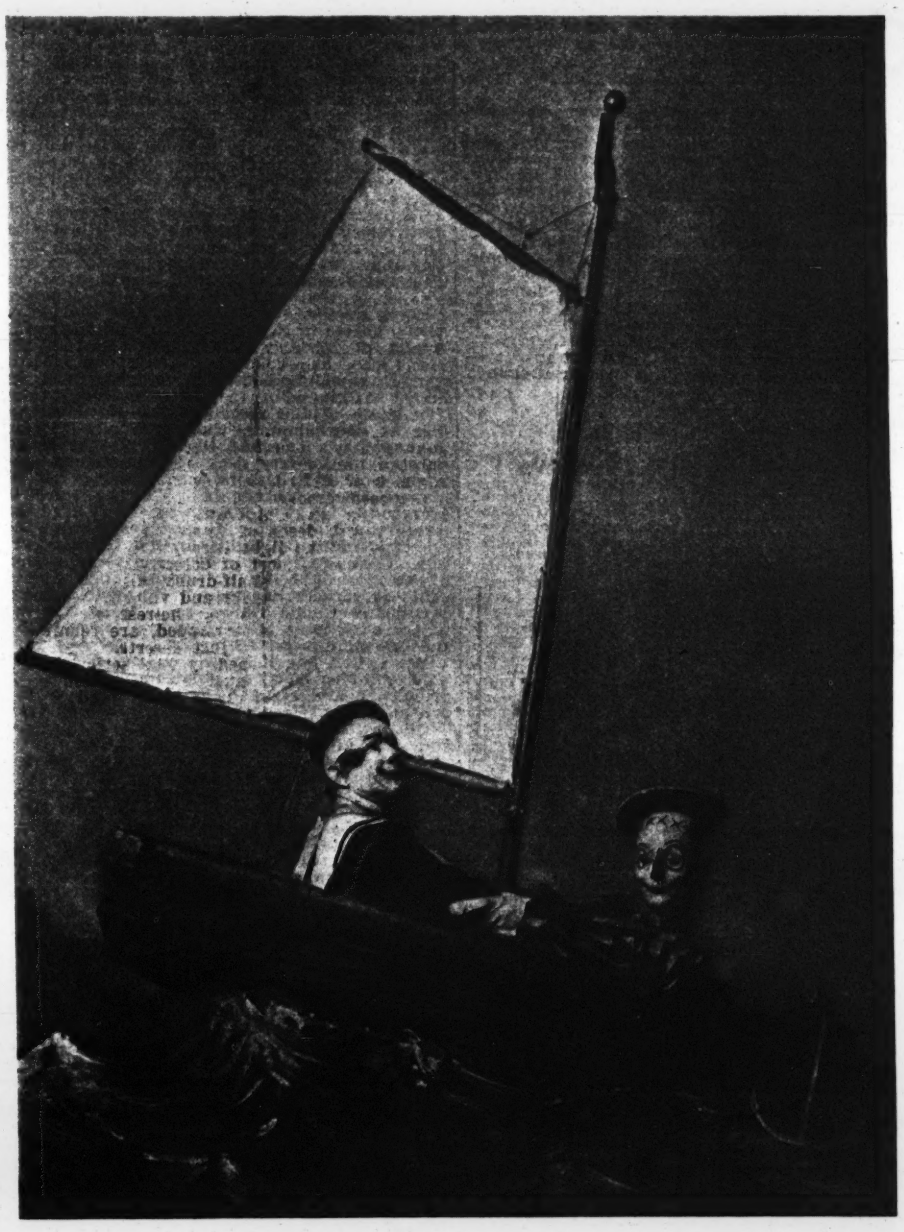
Miss Wycherly has organized an excellent supporting company, which includes P. J. Kelly, Caryl Gillin, Charles Andrews, Carolyn Newcombe, Adelaide Alexander, Peter Dolan, and Caroline Leavitt-Jones. Mr. Kelly was a member of Mr. Yeats' own company in Ireland, and will play the roles that he originated.

BELASCO TAKES THE BIJOU.

David Belasco made contracts last Friday with Henry B. Sire for the tenancy of the Bijou Theatre after Christmas. On Dec. 24 May Irwin, in Mrs. Black Is Back, will leave the Bijou, and on Dec. 26 Mr. Belasco will present there David Warfield in The Music Master—moving that attraction from the Belasco Theatre, where it has been extraordinarily successful. The Music Master will remain at the Bijou through the rest of the season.

Mr. Belasco will therefore have the Belasco Theatre free for Mrs. Leslie Carter and her company in the new play that he has written for her, but the name of which he has not yet announced. Mrs. Carter, who has been for some weeks in Paris purchasing costumes for the production, will return to New York this week and will begin rehearsals immediately.

The new play will be produced at the Belasco on Dec. 26, and is expected to remain there through the season.



MONTGOMERY AND STONE.

One reason for the success of The Wizard of Oz is that Messrs. Montgomery and Stone, drollest of duos, are constantly injecting fresh fun into the extravaganza. They are pictured above in their latest comic deceit, a nautical parody celebrating the recent triumphs of the Japanese over the Russians. This new specialty of the Scarecrow and the Tin Woodman evokes the same unbounded hilarity that their other comicalities in the past excited. The Wizard of Oz, by the way, is breaking all records at the Academy of Music. The receipts for the two performances on Election Day were the largest in the history of the famous old playhouse. The Old Homestead, with Denman Thompson, held the record for big business at the Academy of Music, but the Wizard of Oz, with Montgomery and Stone, reached the high-water mark. The receipts for The Old Homestead were $4,600 for holiday matinee and night; the receipts of The Wizard of Oz for Election Day were $5,014. Both attractions had the same scale of prices.

AMONG THE DRAMATISTS.

Auguste Van Biene, the actor-musician, has commissioned Kenneth Lee to write him two monologues for his approaching tour of the world. They are to be written round the 'cello, and one, entitled The Undiscovered Land, has been already accepted. Mr. Van Biene expects to be in this country in the Autumn of 1905.

Frank Perley has bought a new opera called A Soldier for Love. The libretto is by Cornelia Osgood Tyler and J. Cheever Goodwin, the music by Frederick C. Wright. It will be produced about Nov. 28. The cast includes Viola Gillette, Mabel Hite, Alice Dovey, Henry Bergman, Joseph C. Miron, Walter Jones, Fletcher Norton and George MacFarland.

Mrs. Selena Fetter Royle has brought suit in the Supreme Court to compel N. C. Goodwin to render an accounting of the royalties which she says are due to her because of the production of My Wife's Husband, and for special damages which she avers she has sustained because of Mr. Goodwin's failure to continue to produce it. Mrs. Royle says he broke the agreement on Jan. 9 last, at the expiration of four weeks, and refused to continue to produce the play.

Maurice Donnay has sold the American rights of L'Escalade, which was recently produced at the Renaissance Theatre, in Paris, to C. B. Dillingham, who intends to produce it in New York in the Spring.

"JESS" DANDY'S BIRTHDAY BANQUET.

The entire membership of the Prince of Pilsen company, playing at His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal, last week, was banqueted by "Jess" Dandy on the evening of his birthday, Nov. 9. A dance followed the feast, and the morning sun was peeping through the windows when "Auld Lang Syne" wound up the festivities. Mr. Dandy was presented with a gold-headed ebony cane by Trixie Friganza, on behalf of the company, the ceremony of presentation being unique. A special song composed for the occasion was sung by Miss Friganza, in which the entire company assisted her. Toasts were drunk to the health of Henry W. Savage, Edward A. Braden, George Marion, Charles A. Shaw and the host, who was complimented by every one of the 75 people who comprise the company.

PERSONAL

STEVENS.—Emily Stevens has been a member of Mrs. Fiske's company for three seasons. In Hedda Gabler, at the Manhattan this week, she has the role of Berta. Miss Stevens is the daughter of Robert E. Stevens, the well-known manager, and of the late Emma Maddern, long a favorite actress.

ROBERTS.—H. R. Roberts arrived from England on the Lucania last Saturday. He will again this season be under David Belasco's management, with Mrs. Leslie Carter's company.

ANGLIN.—Margaret Anglin was too nervous to act, and the first night of The Eternal Feminine at the Hyperion, in New Haven, was postponed until Nov. 7.

ROBSON.—Mrs. Stuart Robson sang at the Pleides Club on Nov. 6. This was her first appearance in public since her husband's death.

GRAU.—Maurice Grau has quite recovered his health, and announces that he will return to this country next year and give a series of concerts of scenes from the great operas, with the de Reszkes and Litoinne in the casts.

PAUL.—Howard Paul has gone to Los Angeles to spend the Winter. The mildness and warmth of the climate there at this season surprise him.

IRWIN.—May Irwin states that she will leave a sum of $100,000 to found a National Theatre in New York when in years and interest it accumulates to $5,000,000. The price of admission is never to exceed $1 for one person.

DUREN.—Agnes Duren, of the Irving Place Theatre company, sailed for Germany last Tuesday. Her departure, it is said, was unexpected by Director Conried, who engaged her in Hanover last Summer for the entire season at the Irving Place.

HARRIS.—Wadsworth Harris, of the Warde-Kidder company, gave a recital during the engagement of the company in Louisville before the students of the Semple Collegiate School, and was later the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Anne Crawford Flexner, the dramatist, at the Pendennis Club.

SCHUMANN-HEINK.—Madame Schumann-Heink has furnished a room with all the many toys that delight children and made it a present to the Home for Crippled Children.

TYLER.—George C. Tyler sailed on the Etruria, Nov. 12, to confer with Hall Caine regarding The Prodigal Son production and to make arrangements for the homecoming of Eleanor Robson. The present plan is that she is to arrive on Dec. 22, and give a "welcome home" matinee in New York before appearing in St. Louis on Dec. 26.

SOTHERN.—At a recent meeting of the Shakespeare Society of New York Edward H. Sothern was elected to the life membership made vacant by the death of Wilson Barrett, who had been a member since 1892. Mr. Sothern accepted the membership in a graceful letter, which was ordered incorporated in the society's minutes.

MODJESKA.—Madame Modjeska will make her first appearance in vaudeville at Hammerstein's Victoria in this city on Dec. 19, probably in a condensed version of one of the plays in which she has won fame in the past.

POTTER.—Mrs. James Brown Potter produced her new play by the Rev. Mr. Phillips and called For Church or Stage Nov. 12 at the Savoy Theatre, London. Mrs. Potter's reception was hearty, but that for the play was mixed.

NETHERSOLE.—Olga Nethersole opened her London season at the Shaftesbury Theatre, London, Monday, Nov. 12, with Mrs. Craigie's The Flute of Pan, which was disappointing.

HAPGOOD.—Harry Hapgood, the old-time manager who is now a guest at the Actors' Fund Home, underwent an operation for appendicitis last week at the Smith Infirmary on Staten Island. He stood the operation well, and will return to the Home in a few days.

SYLVIE.—May Sylvie, formerly member of Mrs. John Drew's company at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and of Augustin Daly's company, has been admitted as a permanent guest of the Actors' Fund Home on Staten Island.

LOLOTTE.

Lolotte	Madame Rejane
La Baronne	Suzanne Avril
De Croisillew	M. Dumeny
Un Domestique	M. Bosman

Madame Rejane has not been seen in America since her first tour, which began Feb. 27, 1895, and during which she played Divorçons, Ma Cousine, A Doll's House, Sans Gene and other of her successes. Her piquant and peculiar talent is especially adapted to the Sans Gene order, which made her famous. It had not been forgotten by those who had seen her here and in Paris at the theatre of which her husband is manager, and she was greeted by a more fashionable and typical first-night audience than has been the rule lately because of the itching palms.

The great libraries will give out any book, however immoral in tone, if it is printed in French, on the principle that if one is old enough to have studied French he has arrived at years of discretion. Either this thought or the one that if one goes abroad one must go slumming and see what they call "life," swayed those who chose Amoureuse to reintroduce a great artist. They may be wise financially, but French gentlemen who were present regretted the choice. Paris is not all sewer, and the sewers of Paris are not all France.

Briefly, the theme chosen by Porto-Riche for Amoreuse is the same as Dumas' Francillon, but he does not treat it with the manly self-restraint of the master. Youth and weak minds go to hysterical extremes. Dumas had the wife mercly cause her husband to think her unfaithful. There is no such sanity of true art in this later-day decadent. Etienne, the husband, is winning a reputation for himself and honors for his wife by his profession and writings, but she is not satisfied. With the tyranny of a certain type of woman, not the helpmate, comrade, wifely kind, she would monopolize all his time and thought. She is not broad enough to know that a man's love for his family is the life blood of his work. His enthusiasm for it and self-respecting pride in success is vitalized by his love for her. Germaine is the petty tyrant and must have every moment, and thinks he cannot love her if he loves his chosen profession. There are many women as petty. At the end of the first act she calls him back and lures him by her endearments to miss an evening's engagement important to his career. The revolt against the galling of her chains comes in the second act with his loss of self-respect at his own weakness and despising of her pettiness. In the delirium of anger, heated hotter by her white hot words, he tells her to go wherever she likes, he doesn't care where, even to the arms of the former admirer whose comfortable presence she has been too weak and unwifely to do without, and he rushes out to find again the woman whose presence is not irritating and whose sympathy is more wifely for his success and the depths of the man, not his mere presence and embraces. Being of the hysterical kind it is natural she should take him at his mere angry word's worth and not stand true to himself and her better self, but rush to extremes and the arms of the ever waiting one.

The third act opens with the remorse and shame of all three. A great mind would have given us a great ending, but this author has him start away independent like a man but in the end take her back, for he is too weak to do without this particular woman's presence. The only ones who really suffer were those of the audience who dared think what their future lives would be, and the weak, waiting lover she used for revenge. He is turned out. He has lost friendship and self-respect and gained only the street.

As for the interpretation, it was not stilted, like some other of the productions we have had lately at stilted prices. It shows we can have natural work and artificial prices. The production was a disappointment, the scenery looked as if it came over on a wave-washed deck. Frequent blunders in stage-management marred the artistic whole. Locked doors would swing and hands were warmed at empty grates. Conviction of the reality of life is so hard for even a great artist to obtain, she should not be hampered by lack of sufficient attention to details.

As to Rejane's genius, it would be superfluous and a waste of valuable space to try to find words to describe it or do it justice. One does not fit words to the fixed stars, they simply are there, and Rejane has been an acknowledged luminary for more than the theatrical generation she has been absent. Though the writer of this has seen her in Paris in the meantime, he has but the greater respect for her art. Beauty is only efficient for the first three minutes after the actress appears. During that time Rejane has always found her audiences cold. Then the leaven of her skill begins to work, and they sit up and take notice. The charm moves so completely that when it is rudely cut by the falling guillotine of the curtain enthusiasm breaks out in rounds of applause for the woman. With the handicap of tiny eyes, tiptilted nose, ugly mouth and unpleasant walk, what personal magnetism the woman must have! With what patient study and self-denying pains she has fought her way up from the time she denied herself food, even, to pay for her lessons with Regnier! The years have matured her physique somewhat since we first saw her here in New York, but they have only ripened that marvelous dexterity. Myriads of little ones who only depended on their beauty have given themselves airs, flickered, gone out and been forgotten like burned matches in that ten years. Yet the arc light of her art burns steadily and illumes whatever part she portrays. The cloying irritation of the enticing sensuality of the selfish love of an egotist was given in Amoureuse with infinite lights and shades. She was pert, jaunty, piquant, brilliant in Lalotte.

In the last act of Amoureuse we saw merely the vulgar remorse of the tired body, which is all Germaine could feel, for she is as much a wanton at heart as the two men are cads. Probably the author thought he was here laying bare the human heart. Thank heaven, he is wrong! In his blindness he only stumbled into a sewer. In his under world, which he would have us think is the only real life, newspapers would be printing good deeds with sensational headlines as news. In the real world, France or elsewhere, evil is startling, and published thus.

To take away the taste of the nauseous last act of Amoureuse, Mme. Rejane has been accustomed to give a sparkling little piece called Lolotte. After a dose of evil tasting medicine the drug clerk usually hands you a half glass of something sparkling. Lolotte is a little nothing of sparkling verbiage. A frivolous and rather vulgar actress comes to the house of a fashionable lady to teach her how to act a little part. That she meets here the man who says the same loving nonsense to both is taken as a joke by the people in the play and in the chairs. It gives Rejane's charming gesture and bewitching reading full chance, and serves its purpose by sending the audience homeward smiling and unanalytical.

Of the supporting company the work of M. Gorieux was disappointing, but not so that of the lead, M. Dumeny, who gave excellent characterizations in both pieces. Mme. Avril was excellent in two unimportant parts. The rest of the company was not proportionately good.

The bill was changed Thursday, Nov. 10, and La Passerelle, a three-act farce comedy, by Gresac and Croisset, was given during the remainder of the week, with the following cast:

Jacqueline	Madame Rejane
Helene Dumoulins	Madame Suzanne Avril
Rosalie	Madame Clery
Victoire	Madame Deylia
Roger De Gardannes	M. Dumeny
Blenaime	M. Berthier
Baptistin	M. Keim
Planchet	M. Duc

In November of last year Marie Tempest played at the Hudson Theatre an adaptation of this play, which had been fumigated by her husband, Cosmo Gordon Lennox, and was called The Marriage of Kitty, and is still being successfully produced. A large number of the fashionable audience present the first night at the Lyric Theatre necessarily made comparisons. These were not entirely to the credit of the French production. Admiration was universal for the better staging of the English piece and for the adapter for his skill in introducing a will as the motive and a comedy chaperon, yet keeping all the genuine humor of the original piece. No such artistic restraint was shown by the original writers. The full disgusting details of the one who takes money to become the name wife of a libertine to aid him in a liaison with a divorcee and then wins him for herself was pushed to its extremes of suggestiveness. Even in Paris, where infidelity is only a footlight joke, this play does not take high rank. It is too rank. It was only saved by the clever work of Madame Rejane. It will add nothing to her fame in America. Jacqueline can only be saved to high art by the ingeniousness of girlish innocence. Girlish or innocent Rejane certainly is not. Her art is illumined by the myriad bunch lights and calciums of entire sophistication and worldly knowledge. In the first act she gave us a too hard-headed and foxy girl of the world, desperate for plenty of money and what it brings. When she yields in the second act her eyes are too wide open for the sway of the blind god. Her frank happiness afterward lacked a delicacy and refinement as she confessed to her lawyer that she was not displeased with her husband.

There are only four good parts in this piece. The others were evenly and strongly played for the most there was in them by Mme. Avril and MM. Dumeny and Berthier.

If Madame Rejane is serious in her published declarations that she intends to represent to us the modern and new school of French thought, one would be sorry for a great nation that had nothing better to offer than these evidences of dry rot at its roots. This is not "progress in the study of the serious problems of life," as she calls it, but the feeble flights of degeneracy which mistakes the delirious novelties of the erratic erotic for the boldness of genius. Only the ignorant wrong the French by judging them by the light of such phosphorescent gleams of sewerage. It is to be hoped the other plays of the repertoire will be chosen in such a way they will not so misrepresent the modern school of the better French playwrights.

May Irwin, whose absence from the stage during the past two years has been mourned by laughter lovers, came into public view again last Monday night at the Bijou Theatre in a farce written by George V. Hobart and entitled Mrs. Black Is Back. The large audience assembled was quite as amiable as Miss Irwin herself, and in consequence the occasion was what might be termed a merry meeting as well as a theatrical premiere.

Mrs. Black Is Back makes no great pretentions as a play but it admirably serves the purpose of keeping Miss Irwin in the centre of the stage for the best part of two hours—to the gratification and genuine amusement of the audience. There is enough plot to tie the jests and songs securely together. Moreover it is a clean plot, and for a farce it is rather remarkably logical.

Mrs. Black, before becoming Mrs. Black, was a widow with a son. The son, aged about sev nteen, is traveling in Europe. During the courtship the widow, by a natural accident, cut off seven years from her age. Professor Black, himself a most truthful person, married her in the belief that she was twenty-nine. Then suddenly did Mrs. Black bethink herself of her son, Jack Dangerfield, and with great anxiety she estimated that her twenty-nine years and his seventeen years could hardly be made to seem plausible. Therefore she keeps Jack abroad and every day is obliged to invent new fictions to account for his absence. The Professor meanwhile is having the nursery redecorated and stocked with toys against the coming of his step-son—whom he believes to be ten years old.

Now comes Jack, a full-grown, rather sporty young gentleman with various creditors in his wake, and poor Mrs. Black is obliged to devise more lies and put Jack into various disguises to hide his identity from her husband. To add to the complications, Jack and Professor Black's sister Priscilla have met each other abroad and formed a sentimental attachment. All the while Mrs. Black is trying to screw up sufficient courage to confess her deceit, which has by this time come to assume, in her imagination, the proportions of a crime. When finally the web of prevarications draws so close around the unhappy lady that suicide seems the only escape from her dilemma, she blunders out, with many sobs and gulps, the story of her first fabrication. Professor Black has not the slightest idea what the confession is all about, but he forgives everything in order to stop the flow of tears. Then, of course, comes the introduction of Jack in his proper person, and the happy ending for everybody concerned.

Miss Irwin's performance as Mrs. Black was quite equal in genial spirit and humor to anything that she had ever done before. She did not attempt much in the way of characterization, nor was such effort necessary. The part was made for her, and she could make nothing better of it than by playing herself. This she did in her best manner. Among the several songs that she sang the most amusing were "Nothin' But Talk" and "Bible Stories." These she sang delightfully, and half the audience hummed the tunes with her on the encores.

Edgar Atchison-Ely as Jack was a capital "side partner" for the star, and in his way he was almost as funny. A. S. Lipman played the conventional role of Professor Black in good conventional comedy fashion. John G. Sparks got a good bit of humor out of the part of Larry McManus, an Irish valet. Nick Long struggled manfully with the thankless role of Don Pedro, a card sharp, and Charles Lane gave an excellent imitation of the modern pugilist in the character of Tom Larkey.

Jane Burby was a handsome and attractive Emily Mason—which was all that the part required or permitted; Frances Gordon was a vivacious Priscilla, and May Donohue did an admirable bit of character work as Lizzie, an Irish cook. The other roles were capably played and most of the girls in the background were very pretty.

The one stage setting, showing the exterior of Professor Black's home on the Hudson, was sufficiently attractive. The costumes of the women were handsome, and in the groupings the stage-manager arranged some very pretty effects of color.

Liberty—Little Johnny Jones.

Musical play in three acts, by George M. Cohan. Produced Nov. 7.

Anthony Anstey	Jerry J. Cohan
Sing Song	J. Bernard Dyllyn
Timothy D. McGee	Sam J. Ryan
Henry Hapgood	Donald Brian
The Unknown	Tom Lewis
Jenkins, Captain Squirvy	C. J. Harrington
Bell Boy	William Seymour
Inspector Perkins	Charles Bachmann
Stevens	Joseph Leslie
Chung Fow	Charles Stevens
Hung Chung	Fred Williams
Johnny Jones	George M. Cohan
Mrs. Andrew Kenworth	Helen F. Cohan
Florabelle Fly	Truly Shattuck
Bessie	Edith Tyler
Goldie Gates, Rosario Fauchette, Earl of Bloomsbury	Ethel Levey

George M. Cohan made his debut as a star on Monday evening, Nov. 7, under the direction of Sam H. Harris, in a new musical play, written by himself, called Little Johnny Jones. Mr. Cohan had established a reputation with his father, mother and sister—the group being known as the Four Cohans—and no more delightful family of funmakers has in recent years chased dull care away from behind the footlights. Time brings many changes, and the Four Cohans have passed into a happy memory. In their stead we have George M. as a star, and in an entirely different sort of play from that in which the original Four made themselves the idols of the middle-class playgoers of the United States.

In Little Johnny Jones Mr. Cohan has written a melodrama with musical trimmings, as it were. He has chosen to fit himself with a part in which very little of the George Cohan of the old days is shown. He wears no funny clothes, and does none of the amusing tricks that used to make the hearts of his admirers jump with delight. He has not even treated himself to a song like "If I Were Only Mr. Morgan!" Where this might be expected to come in he recites to a musical accompaniment a soliloquy called "Life's a Funny Proposition," in which there are no funny lines. It is a sort of sermonette on the problems of existence. In writing the play Mr. Cohan has been most ungenerous to himself, and extraordinarily kind to his support, especially to Tom Lewis, who took the audience by storm in a quaint character role that simply exuded that great desideratum of actors—"fat."

Little Johnny Jones is in three acts. The first takes place in front of the Hotel Cecil, London, and the play opens in a bright, lively way that gives promise of good things to come. The melodramatic plot soon asserts itself, and we learn that Johnny Jones, an American jockey, has come over to England to ride one of the horses in the Derby. He has incurred the enmity of Anthony Anstey, an American gambler, who has made a fortune in running Chinese gambling houses in collusion with Sing Song, a Chinese of the more intelligent class. The scene of the second act is the steamboat pier at Southampton, where the plot thickens. Johnny Jones has lost the Derby race, and is pursued to the very deck of the steamer by an angry mob of Britishers, who denounce him for his supposed crookedness. In the third act everybody is in Chinatown, San Francisco, where the dark deeds of Anstey and Sing Song are exposed to the light through the agency of "The Unknown," a sort of detective who makes a pretense of being half-drunk all the time, while he gathers in papers and valuable secrets. Jones and Goldie Gates, an heiress who was supposed to have been kidnapped, are reunited, and the villains get their just deserts.

Mr. Cohan has lightened up the serious plot with eighteen musical numbers, in which the principals are assisted by a large and well-drilled chorus. One of the best is a song called "'Op in the 'Ansom," sung by six coachmen and six girls. Mr. Cohan's entrance song, "Yankee Doodle Boy," was very lively, and at its finish he did a short dance that was a reminder of the steps that first made him such a favorite in vaudeville. Other good songs were "Good-Bye, Flo," sung by Ethel Levey and a chorus; "Give My Regards to Broadway," sung by Mr. Cohan and chorus, with a transformation scenic effect that was very well managed, and "They're All My Friends," sung by Sam J. Ryan.

While he deserves praise for his generosity to the other members of the company, Mr. Cohan's friends and admirers were disappointed at the way in which he has treated himself. When he wishes he can be as amusing as any comedian on the stage, and in a way all his own. It seems a pity that he has decided to take such a serious view of his abilities and has elected to play a part that gives him no opportunity to show himself at his best. The greater share of the honors fell to Tom Lewis, as "The Unknown." Mr. Lewis has hitherto been known as a vaudeville comedian in black face, but in this part he proved that he could do other things besides play "nigger" farce. Every speech and every move he made was the signal for a hearty laugh, and his every exit was punctuated with applause. Ethel Levey played three parts, in one of which she wore male attire becomingly. She had some good songs which she sang with her usual skill, and played her various roles cleverly. Jerry J. Cohan, who used to be so amusing in parts that allowed his genial humor full play, was (alas!) the chief villain of the play. He is not accustomed to villainy, and simply couldn't be as bad as the lines and situations made him out to be. Helen F. Cohan, also of the original Four, had a serious role that did not allow her bonny nature scope. She was beautifully dressed and looked handsome. Sam J. Ryan had some good opportunities in the part of a New York Irishman with a liking for politics and horses, and played with much unction and a rich brogue that had the genuine ring. J. Bernard Dyllyn, as the Chinaman with sinister motives, gave a carefully studied portrayal, but had only one opportunity to air his fine voice in song. Truly Shattuck permeated the piece as a "fly" San Francisco newspaper reporter. The others were quite satisfactory.

The play was well mounted, the scenery, costumes and accessories being pretty and in good taste. The electrical effects were excellent, and the performance showed clearly that it had been carefully supervised by the author, who has few superiors as a musical comedy stage manager.

American - His Last Dollar.

Play in five acts by David Higgins and Baldwin G. Cooke. Produced Nov. 7.

Bob Brockett	Guy F. Evans
Tom Linson	W. Burt Cartwright

Old Sport	F. T. Owens
Jim	C. E. Rathburn
The Tout	W. F. Petrie
The Judge	W. W. Wilcox
The Horse Dealer	Charles La Vany
Ephraim	Taylor Parks
Eleanor Downs	Eleanor Montell
Viola Grayson	Katherine Miller
Mrs. Giles	Isabel O'Madigan
Alicia	Maud Alice Lee
Julia	Emma Salvatore
Baron Rothschild	Baby Reynolds
Little Abraham	Baby Nagle

His Last Dollar, a racing melodrama in five acts by David Higgins and Baldwin G. Cooke, was presented for the first time in New York at the American Theatre last Monday night before a large and, most of the time, very enthusiastic audience. The play is admirably suited to that large class of playgoers that is ever athirst for excitement but that has no particular taste for gore. His Last Dollar—like most dollars, alas!—goes rapidly, and meanwhile the spectators have a good run for their money.

The scenes are laid in the "horsey" section of Long Island, on Joe Braxton's farm, and the race scene—of course there is a race scene—is at Sheepshead Bay on Futurity Day. Joe Braxton is described on the programme as "a Kentucky gentleman," and he proves himself a pretty fair representative of that agreeable type of American. He has come East with several millions in cold cash and has established himself as a country gentleman as Braxton Villa. Naturally a frank, honest and trusting Kentuckian with cash in plenty could not remain in New York long without falling into the hands of the gentleman adventurer and the more or less ladylike adventuress. In the case of Braxton these two necessary and to be expected persons are Tom Linton and Viola Grayson.

Linton, by means of Wall Street schemes, strips Braxton of his funds, while Viola ensnares his heart and incidentally gets some share in the monetary spoils. But while this is going on there creeps into the life of Braxton a new interest, awakened by pretty Eleanor Downs, from Kentucky. Eleanor has a race horse, "Mongrel" by name, that she desires to sell in order that she may raise the mortgage from her Kentucky farm and provide comfort for her aged father. Braxton rides the horse in the Futurity—when the last dollar point has been reached—and besides winning the race and a fortune he escapes from his enemies and gains the heart of Eleanor. It is all fairly plausible, and there is "something doing" all the time.

Mr. Higgins, half-author of the piece, was the Joe Braxton in the performance, and his impersonation was altogether admirable. He was not at all the sleek, light-haired, long-suffering hero of conventional melodrama. Instead he was a wiry, alert, none too handsome, and a very human person, who took his whiskey straight and was straight in all his dealings. He was very much a real man, and the audience recognized him as such and admired him.

W. Burt Cartwright, as the scheming Tom Linson, was a handsome, mannerly and very obvious villain, just such a villain as melodrama lovers delight in. Thomas Reynolds gave a capital impersonation of Kaufman, a Jewish broker.

Eleanor Montell was a pretty, sweet and gracious Eleanor Downs; Katherine Miller as Viola Grayson was spirited and authoritative, and Isabel O'Madigan was an excellent Mrs. Giles. The other roles were in capable hands and the mounting was thoroughly satisfactory.

FRENCH REPERTOIRE.

For the final performances of his season at the American M. Cazelles presented Adolphe d'Ennery's Marie Jeanne with the following members of his company in the cast:

Bertrand	M. J. Dulac
Remy	M. Dane
Theobald de Bussieres	M. Beramger
Applane	M. Raymond
Le Decleur	M. Joubert
Guillaume	M. Mazer
Berlinguet	M. Desplas
Grosmenn	M. Petibon
Un Infirmier	M. Vallee
Un Domestique	M. Chalais
Marie Jeanne	Madame D. Renot
Sophie de Bussieres	Madame C. Arnaud
Catherine	Madame D'Hamy
Marguerite	Madame Darthien
Charlotte	Madame Deroche

This well-known old piece by the author of The Two Orphans is responsible for quite as many tears as Jane Eyre. It is highly to the credit of Madame Renot that, by sheer force of her personality, she was able to carry the much-abused lady through all her melodramatic troubles and five acts, and hold an intelligent audience, even bringing tears and applause. Her work, of which we have seen too little, was ably seconded by MM. Dulac, Raymond, Dane, and Joubert. Madame Arnaud was charming in the slightly characterized part of the other mother. The small parts were well played, as has been the rule with this company, on the good, old plan of lead one night and servants, or, perhaps, extras, the next. We have been so surfeited lately with the lopsided star system that makes a play wobble like a wagon on three wheels that the attendance has increased rapidly, especially among the better class of Americans, as the really good work of this company becomes known, and that they are presenting the better classes of plays of their great literature.

There were many recalls and regrets at the good-bys. In response to calls for the manager, the stage-manager, M. Chawny, appeared and read an announcement in the courteous French form that they intended to return in March, and expressing regret for the rudeness of the scenery, which has precluded their giving some of the plays intended. This, it seems, is owing to a misunderstanding much to be regretted. Better things are hoped and promised for the supplementary season. It was with real regret the large audience cheered and cried au revoir for many minutes, then filed out singing the "Marseillaise."

Fourteenth Street—The Way to Kenmare.

Comedy-dama in four acts, by Edward E. Rose. Produced Nov. 7.

Dan Maguire	Andrew Mack
Captain Clement Fairley	Hugo Toland
Roy Donald	William J. Townshend
The Earl of Kenmare	George W. Deyo
Bentley Harden	Myron Calice
Baron Gustavus Hergogengarten	Richard Gorman
Martin Keen	Edward J. McCormack
Con O'Neil	Luke Martin
Mulkenan Hogan	Eddie Heron
Patrick O'Shale	Thomas E. Jackson
McShane	John Napier
Jerry	E. Constance
Rose Donald	Margaret Robinson
Miss Honoria Maloney	Annie Mack Berlein
Moira Doolan	Gertrude Toland
Julia	Mae Stevenson

That Andrew Mack has a warm place in the affections of the Irish and Irish-Americans of New York was amply shown on Monday evening of last week, when a large audience of the sons and daughters of Erin gathered to welcome him in a new play called The Way to Kenmare, written for him by Edward E. Rose.

Kenmare is a locality in Ireland, and the "way" to it in this particular instance led through the highways of heroism, romance and good humor, and the wayfarers arrived at their destination in a very happy fashion. In other words, Mr. Rose has built around Mr. Mack an entertainment like a thousand others of the same kind. It doesn't seem to matter that the same ideas have been used over and over again; as long as the hero of an Irish play has witty lines, is able to circumvent the villain several times during the evening, and emerge triumphant at the end, the play is sure to be a success, even if the situations are as threadbare as a tramp's coat and as conventional as Republican success at the polls.

The action of the play begins in New York. Dan Maguire, who is the rightful heir to the Earldom of Kenmare, is in love with Rose Donald. He has not seen her in ten years, having gone West to dig his fortune in the mines. He arrives in New York on Rose's birthday, to find that Captain Fairley, an English adventurer, is laying siege to the heart of the girl he had hoped to make his wife. (The Englishman, by the way, is a claimant for the Kenmare Earldom.) The second act finds everybody in Ireland. Dan, disguised as a "broth of a boy," in the knee breeches and red wig that invariably go with this sort of character, plays fast and loose with those who are trying to injure him. He recovers the page in the church register containing the entry of his mother's marriage, but not without undergoing the usual dangers and difficulties, and is able to humble the villain to the dust in the presence of his sweetheart, whom he folds to his bosom as the peasantry outside the window hail him as the Earl of Kenmare.

It was good in these days of namby-pambiness and applauseless audiences to hear the laughter that rang through the old Fourteenth Street Theatre. Not a point was missed, and the spectators let their emotions have sway in a manner that must have brought much joy to Mr. Mack and his associates. The star was his usual bright, buoyant, happy self, and with every quip, and by his clever work in the stronger situations, took the house by storm. He sang four new songs, "Dan, My Darlin' Dan," "The Rose of Kenmare," "She Just Suits Me," and "The Legend of the Maguires," and all of them were vociferously encored. Margaret Robinson as Rose was most pleasing, and received a hearty round of applause every time she snubbed the Englishman. Annie Mack Berlein had a delicious brogue, and gave a natural impersonation of an Irishwoman who had undergone a slight polishing in America. Gertrude Toland as Moira Doolan played sympathetically. Hugo Toland as the villain made a fine appearance and was as obnoxious to the audience as the requirements of the part demanded. Eddie Heron was a farce-comedy Irishman, with a vaudeville brogue of the pattern affected by Johnny Ray, that seemed very much out of place in a play of this kind. Another farce-comedy character was that of Baron Hergogengarten, played by Richard Gorman. Both men were funny at times, but not legitimately amusing. Their funmaking was of the Harrigan school. Good bits of character work were also done by Edward J. McCormack as Martin Keen; Thomas E. Jackson as Patrick O'Shale, and Luke Martin as Con O'Neil. William J. Townshend as Roy Donald, George W. Deyo as the Earl, Myron Calice as Bentley Harden, and John Napier, E. Constance, and Mae Stevenson were satisfactory.

The scenery in the second and third acts was picturesque, and the effects were well managed. Mr. Mack appears to have a winner in The Way to Kenmare, and will remain here for an indefinite period.

West End—Down the Pike.

Musical comedy in two acts, by W. G. Rose and G. W. Quigley. Produced Nov. 7.

McCorkle	Johnny Ray
Russell Keene	A. A. Mudge
Esau Wonder	Phil Peters
Uncle Cohen	Harry First
Jack Noble	Wilbur Held
Bluffon West	Harry Collignon
Harry Wilder	George H. Timmons
Tips	Harry Duncan
Pewee, Texas	Tom Leo
Bronco Bill	Ed B. Roscoe
Front	Will Llewellyn
Officer	Ed B. Roscoe
Ima Lune	J. J. Harvey
Will U. Touchem	Paul Livingston
Mollie May	Sophie Burnham
Flourette	Nettie Peters
Rosie Dawn	Jessie Chapman
Ella Waite	Lucile Deval
Miss Fortune	Nellie Chilters
Mrs. Russell Keene	Emma Ray

At the West End Theatre last week New York saw for the first time the new musical comedy by W. G. Rose and G. W. Quigley, written to exploit the talents of Johnny and Emma Ray. Down the Pike is its title, and it may be said that it is the most amusing piece that these players have been seen in here.

Down the Pike has but the semblance of a plot, yet the slight story permits the introduction of many special musical and other features in the entertainment, and still holds enough of plan to be recognizable at proper intervals. The comedy opens in the vestibule or lobby of the Paradise Flats, in which many of the characters reside or do business. Johnny Ray is a janitor, with the amusing characteristics of that clan; Mr. Mudge is a broker, whose wife, Emma Ray, is jealous of him, and whose brother-in-law, taken by George H. Timmons, is what is known as a chronic "toucher;" Wilbur Held is an artist, who is in love with the niece of the broker's wife, and mention of these characters alone will give a clew to the more pronounced sources of the fun developed, for in order to escape the surveillance of his wife, who has hired a detective to watch him, the broker disguises himself as McCorkle, the janitor; the artist adopts the very same disguise to assist his love suit, and as the sponger, Mr. Timmons, makes up as the broker in order to secure funds in his name from a convenient pawnbroker, Uncle Cohen (Harry First). The complications that follow these disguises, particularly when it appears that there are three McCorkles in the field, are unusually amusing. A detective (Phil Peters), a plunger (Harry Collignon), Tips, "a handy boy" (Harry Duncan), a bad man from Arizona (Ed J. Roscoe), a lunatic (J. J. Harvey), a burglar (Paul Livingston), a donkey and an elephant, both by Tom Leo, the inevitable policeman, a milliner, an old maid and other characters, not to mention ten typewriters, a bevy of maids, and a number of bellboys, make-up a variety of figures quite sufficient for the purposes of the piece. The second act takes place at the Cascade Building at the St. Louis Fair, whither all of the characters necessary are transported, and here, as in the first act, much happens to amuse. Many songs are sung incidentally, among them being "If I Were Only You," "I Am the Janitor," "Back, Back to Baltimore," "Farewell, Nellie Mine," "Kentucky Babe," "Snowball Sammy," and "Down the Pike." The company works together admirably, while the individual efforts are clever. Johnny Ray's role is congenial, while Emma Ray makes the most of her part. Phil Peters was notably clever as the detective. A good-looking chorus is well drilled, and the stage-management, for which Gertrude Hoffman is responsible, is clever and effective. The bill this week is Eugenie Blair in Iris, note of which will be made next week.

Tracked Around the World had its first New York representation at the New Star last week, under the management of A. H. Woods, and was received with favor, being presented in attractive form with handsome scenery and stage mounting.

The play relates the adventures of a detective who is seeking to recover some stolen jewels, and it takes six acts crammed with exciting episodes to depict his many encounters with the crooks he is pursuing. He is accompanied by an amateur sleuth, who helps him also to rescue from the robbers' clutches the original owner of the jewels, a girl with whom the detective is in love. Their double mission is finally accomplished in triumph.

The play suggests a farce at times, and is enlivened by several musical numbers. A large company was employed in its presentation, prominent among whom was Georgie Mack, who made quite a hit and sang several songs acceptably. A. Byron Beasley was also good as Bill Hickory, the detective. The Flannigan of J. C. Malaidy was excellent, and Harry Morrison did well as Moy Foy, a Chinese gambler. The 'Frisco Kate of Beatrice Golden was a very clever sketch of a slum girl. Albert Hall as Jack Folly was successful in his role, and Sadie Jansell, as Babe Folly made the part prominent by her well sustained efforts. Edmund Soraghan made an adroit and resourceful villain and was well supported by Joseph R. Garry as Vandine, his valet. Harlan Knight furnished humor as Reuben Glue and Etta Robson as Saleratus, his wife, had a most amusing make-up. Scene 2 of Act II showed Mr. and Mrs. Glue in a sleeping car, together with several minstrel girls, impersonated by Elinor Hill, Margaret Hagen, Brenda Fowler, Helen Chester, Andree Marshall, Daisy Bradley, and Mona Eames. This aggregation of talent united to produce a very diverting scene, the car porter, taken by Sydney Craven, being an amusing figure in the hilarious ensemble. Other parts were cared for by Mazie Oliver, C. It. Maynard, H. N. Hubbard, Sam Harris, C. W. Morton, Alexander Mackenzie, William Miller, H. N. Morris, Maude Belle Sewell, Ella Parks, Amy La Salle, I. Potter, Walter Moore, William Kemp, and W. P. Roser.

This week, Why Girls Leave Home.

Windsor—Fast Life in New York.

Melodrama in four acts, by Theodore Kremer. Produced Nov. 7.

John Drew	Francis Yale
Guy Standing	Louis J. Cody
Buck Speedy	Le Roy E. Summer
Harold Proctor	John Connely
Bill	Harry Scott
Joe	Louis Wallace
Mike Hennessey	Albert Wilson
Belmont	James Grant
Gaston	Jewels Ferrar
Captain Winter	Mat Walters
Clancey	Sam Thomas
Angolotti	H. De Rosa
Rubin	Alfred Doll
Allen	Hugh Dessler
Gentleman	Harry Kohn
Marker	Alfred Hutchings
Maude Irving	Bertha Willsea
Elita Proctor	Miss Trescott
Leah Silver	Blanche Henshaw
Madame Richepan	Tessie Lawrence
Nana	Frances Cameron
Mrs. Harvest	Grace Le Roy
Mrs. Dooley	Julia Summerfield
Mrs. Vennette	Hannah May
Julian Rose	Sammy Ikenstein

A house packed to the doors at the Windsor Theatre, on the Bowery, last week Monday matinee greeted Theodore Kremer's latest, "an album of pictures of the life that kills in the metropolis," served up in twelve lurid scenes and entitled Fast Life in New York. The villains, Guy Standing, artist, and Elita Proctor, model and adventuress, assisted by some crooks, try to down John Drew, hero, and Maud Irving, his fiancee, assisted by some friendly Jews, a bit of Chinatown, policemen, etc. But in the end the right parties come out on top, thanks to the adventuress, who turns repentant in the last act, as they very often do in plays.

Mr. Kremer has drawn his characters and scenes and incidents from all sides of New York. Characters that seemed to have stepped from the stage on Broadway were John Drew, Guy Standing, Elita Proctor and Maude Irving. One expected to find Henry Fealy further down the programme. From the newspaper came Gaston and Mrs. Dooly. For the weather there were Captain Winter and Mrs. Harvest. Belmont, Rubin and Marker you may find where you choose, but not "Gentleman" and "Silver."

Act one swings around the Proctors and their mansion. Here happens a murder. Mr. Proctor is the victim, for his money, and his noble relative, the hero, is cut off from his rightful share and accused of the crime by the villain and his gang. In act two are seen a poolroom and Herald Square at night, with snow and a line of the poor waiting for bread at a free lunch wagon. In act three is seen Standing's art studio, where models stand on thrones, the adventuress and the heroine indulge in a fencing match, where there is a gallant rescue through a paper ceiling, and Julian Rose as Sammy, the Jew hero, dressed to represent a statue, in his underclothes, sports around with a pistol that emits a regular Election noise. Amid these thrilling incidents Blanche Henshaw gives a very good specialty. Act four starts in the Subway Tavern, kept by Jews, and Bishop Potter's name is taken in vain. When the villain shows surprise at finding the hero there, the hero retorts: "This place was opened by one of the best men that ever lived." The villain wants to know if "John Drew and Guy Standing visit this place, too." The next scene is a drop representing the Grand Circle at Fifty-ninth street, with all the "ads." that assist the wayfarer in identifying the place. Here it is that the adventuress says: "All who have sinned like I have, must share my fate" (wild applause), and then goes to pieces on the heroine's shoulder. The last scene is in Canfield's gambling palace, where John, the hero (a nice thing to do at the end of the play), gambles away his money with Guy Standing, who lures him to do it. Then Elita Proctor, dressed as a man, comes in and wins back the money from her villain ex-friend, gives it to the hero, who rightly owns it, shoots villain, and thus ends the play amid wild confusion.

The long cast worked hard and included two very good actors—Julian Rose, an old vaudeville favorite, who was excellent as the Jew, and Virginia Drew Trescott, who has played many very much better parts, though she was Elita Proctor, the adventuress, to the life. It is not necessary to comment on Mr. Kremer's peculiar method of naming his characters in this play.

Irving Place—German Repertoire.

It is a pity that every lover of good acting in the city cannot see Old Heidelberg as it is given at the Irving Place Theatre. Those who saw the English versions of the play would open their eyes. With the original before one it is easy to understand why this charming idyll of college life has occupied so high a place in the affections of the German theatregoing public. The second act, at Rüder's Inn, on the banks of the Neckar, with the jolly student corps as the principal element in the picture, has so much atmosphere that the illusion for the moment seems reality. After all, though, the acting is the thing. Never has Herr Conried's company appeared to better advantage, never has the ensemble acting approached so near perfection, as in Meyer-Foerster's comedy.

The occasion of its revival was the American debut of Harry Walden, a great favorite in Berlin, where at the Deutsches Theatre he has played the part of Karl Heinrich many times. Herr Walden has a pleasing stage presence and, to all appearances, has his art at his finger tips. He is easy and unconstrained, with a good voice, which he uses admirably. His elocution leaves nothing to be desired: each word is uttered so clearly and distinctly that there never is any difficulty in understanding him. His methods are characterized by naturalness and by a repression which brings out and does not hide the points he wishes to make.

Hedwig von Ostermann again appeared as Käthie. All has been said of her performance when one states that it is the most delicious, the sweetest, the most tender, the most instinct with girlish ingenuousness and modesty that can be imagined. Max Hänseler was, as on the other occasions when the play was given at this house, the Dr. Jüttner. Over his performance, too, it is easy to become enthusiastic. Now he appealed to the risibilities, again he touched the feelings and dimmed the eye. Above all, he infused the part with a bonhomie that warmed the cockles of one's heart. Gustav von Seyffertitz, as Kellermann, and Willy Frey, as Rüder, each squeezed his character dry of its comic possibilities. Franz Kierschner had his old part, Lutz, and did it well. August Meyer-Elgen was a capable von Haugk. The play was well staged and the body of students was well managed.

THE ROBBERS.

Schiller's birthday was celebrated last Friday night by a performance of The Robbers. An overflowing audience attested the popularity of the tragedy. The most satisfactory acting of the evening in the major roles was that of August Meyer-Elgen, the Franz, who played with subtlety and polish. Max Freiburg as Karl was uneven. His weakness lies to a large extent in his unskillful use of a not particularly good voice. He begins his heroic speeches in two high a key. Gustav von Seyffertitz as Spiegelberg, Heinrich Marlow as Schweizer, Paul Hagemann as Roller and Bruno Schönfeld as Kosinsky, all members of the robber band, were excellent. Max Hänseler made the most of the part of the monk. The little that Margarethe Rühmkorf had to do as Amalia she did well.

Third Avenue—The Wayward Son.

The Wayward Son came back to town at the Third Avenue last week. Neil Twomey, the author, played the title-role with his usual force. William L. Raynore as the sleepy negro, Florence Johnstone as the Secret Service heroine, Bert Carber, now the chief of police, the villain, instead of the boy with pugilistic ambitions, and Joseph Fitzpatrick as the merchant, are still with the company. Alice Nichols in a character part, Edythe Raynore in a child part, Edgar J. Schooley as the boy, Frank M. Allen, Arthur Young, and George Edwards are new to the play. This week Havlin and Garen are presenting Walter Mathews' American melodrama, The Stain of Guilt. William B. Stout, Sara Lewis, William Short, Harry J. Scott, Harry Woods, Marion Hyde, Johnnie Hughes, Gilbert Tossick, J. W. Traynor, George Grant, Arthur Watson, and John Morton are in the cast.

At Other Playhouses.

CASINO.—This is the final week of Piff, Paff, Pauf, which will be succeeded on Monday by The Princess Fiddlesticks.

BROADWAY.—This is the last week of Love's Lottery, which will be succeeded next Monday by The Two Roses.

CRITERION.—Fay Davis will be seen here on Wednesday night in The Rich Mrs. Repton. In the company are Ernest Lanford, Arthur Lawrence, Arthur Eliot, Vincent Serrano, and Catherine Stewart.

MANHATTAN.—Becky Sharp will be played here until Thursday evening, when Hedda Gabler will be revived for four weeks. This revival, in which Mrs. Fiske will be seen as Hedda, will introduce John Mason as Ellert Lovberg and George Arless as Assessor Brack, while William B. Mack will again appear as Terman. Note of the performance will be made next week.

PRINCESS.—Amelia Bingham and her company are appearing in a revival of The Climbers, note of the performance of which will be made next week.

HUDSON.—To-night (Tuesday) Ethel Barrymore will appear in Sunday, with Bruce McRae as leading man.

LYCEUM.—Sir Charles Wyndham begins a season of ten weeks here in David Garrick, which will be followed by Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace.

KNICKERBOCKER.—The Sothern-Marlowe company will devote this week to Hamlet, Mr. Sothern playing Hamlet, Miss Marlowe Ophelia, W. H. Crompton Polonius, Norman Hackett Horatio, Sydney C. Mather Laertes, G. Harrison Hunter the King, and Mary Hall the Queen.

MAJESTIC.—In A China Doll, which will open here on Saturday night, will be seen W. H. MacDonald, Albert Hart, George C. Boniface, Jr., Helen Royton, and Adele Rafter.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—Mrs. Campbell in The Sorceress is the attraction for the week.

A MISLEADING PAMPHLET.

Messrs. Sanger and Jordan, of 1430 Broadway, recently issued a list of plays, copies of which were sent out to managers. The publication intimated or implied that many plays over which this firm has no control were to be had by managers through their agency. The publication did not state this in so many words, but the recipient of a copy would naturally draw such an inference, as the circular was intended to advertise Messrs. Jordan and Sanger's business.

Elisabeth Marbury was one of those whose plays appeared in the list. She sent its publishers the following letter:

NEW YORK, Nov. 1, 1904.

Messrs. Sanger and Jordan:

DEAR SIRS,—I have had called to my attention a pamphlet which you have just issued giving a list of plays, with the inference that the same can be obtained on royalty. By what authority, may I ask, do you advertise my property? I need not go through your entire list, although I find therein many of the plays for which I hold the exclusive agency. I will merely refer to the plays by Clidye Fitch and a play called Merry Gotham, which is my own personal property. Unless I have a speedy explanation from you of what I consider a very high-handed measure I shall refer this matter to my lawyers, who will certainly take some means of preventing the misapprehension which your pamphlet might produce in the minds of managers to whom it is addressed. Yours sincerely, ELISABETH MARBURY.

To this communication Miss Marbury received the following answer:

NEW YORK, Nov. 1, 1904.

DEAR MISS MARBURY,—We are in receipt of your esteemed favor of even date. In the pamphlet referred to there is absolutely no inference whatever that the plays listed therein are available or that we have any agency whatever for them. In getting up this little booklet we only sought to compile a complete list of plays, old and new, as a souvenir that might be of use for purposes of reference. To the best of our knowledge and belief we have in no manner trespassed upon any one's rights by merely mentioning the title of a play as being in existence, and regret that you should have misconstrued the matter. Yours very truly, SANGER AND JORDAN.

ANNA MARIE BERGER DEAD.

Mrs. Anna Marie Berger, the mother of the famous Berger Family, died at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. W. E. Hardy, in Jackson, Mich., on Oct. 30. She was eighty-five years of age and had been in ill health for many months.

Mrs. Berger was left a widow some forty years ago, and with her six children she began touring the country giving musical entertainments in which bell-ringing was the important feature. The company was at first known as the Peake-Berger family. Later the partnership with the Peakes was dissolved and the Bergers continued by themselves and were brilliantly successful. In the early years of the enterprise Mrs. Berger was the general manager and director of the company.

Of the six children of Mrs. Berger four survive her. They are Fred Berger, the well-known theatrical manager of Washington; Louise, who is the widow of Sol Smith Russell; Anna, the cornetist, who is the widow of Leigh Lynch, and Henry Berger, the manager, who lives in Boston.

BROOKLYN ACADEMY SURE.

The success of the project to have a new Academy of Music in Brooklyn to take the place of the old building which was burned last Fall was assured Nov. 12, when the last $100 necessary to complete the fund of $600,000 for the construction of the new Academy was subscribed. Those named by the Legislature to act as incorporators of the Academy will meet to-day (Tuesday) and organize.

ROSE STAHL.

JUDGE'S FAVORITES.

Rose Stahl in The Chorus Lady.

With vim and dash
You wing and flash
And fill all souls with levity.
Your fun, methinks,
Fits care's dull chinks
And quite promotes longevity.
You are, don't fret,
A whole sextette
Of fun-bound femininity;
And that is why
The flowers fly
Around in your vicinity.

THE DOLMETSCH CONCERTS.

Arnold Dolmetsch, the musical antiquarian, whose authority is unique, after an absence of two seasons gave the first of his present series of quaint lecture recitals and exhibitions of antique musical instruments of great historic value at the Manhattan Theatre on the afternoon of Nov. 7. Assisting Mr. Dolmetsch were Mrs. Mabel Dolmetsch and Miss Kathleen Salmon. The stage setting of dull green and red, the ancient graceful costumes of the performers (Mr. Dolmetsch himself wearing velvet knickerbockers), together with the beautiful antique instruments, presented a rarely artistic picture. The instruments included the lute, the viola d'amoré, two harpsichords, the claveçin, the virginal, the treble viol and the viola de gamba. The lecturer gave a concise, entertaining and gracefully humerous description of each. He also described the bits of ancient music rendered, relying for the most part on Pepy's Diary. Miss Salmon sang the "Lark Song" of Henry Lawes. The thinness and quality of her voice suited the music precisely. The lecturer constantly spoke disparagingly of modern noisy musical efforts. It is a rare treat from an historical standpoint to listen to this old music. The entertainment is wholly delightful. The artists were accorded a cordial welcome. A recital was given at Mendelssohn Hall Friday evening, another at the Manhattan Theatre yesterday (Monday) afternoon, and these are to be followed by one Nov. 20 at 8.30 P.M., and one on Nov. 28 at 2.30 P.M., at the Manhattan Theatre.

PROGRESSIVE STAGE SOCIETY.

The recently organized Progressive Stage Society will make its first production of plays at Carnegie Lyceum on the afternoon of Sunday, Nov. 27. The performance will begin at three o'clock and three one-act plays will be presented. They are The Scab, which was written for the Society by Elsa Barker; The Broken Pitcher, translated from the German of Heinrich von Kleist by Eugene Smith, and Miner and Soldier, translated from the French of Madame Tola Dorian.

Only members of the Society will be admitted to the performance, but any one may secure membership by paying an initiation fee of 25 cents, and 50 cents for dues for November. Applications must be made, however, on or before Nov. 24.

An author's conference, to which members will be admitted, will take place at the Professional Woman's League on the afternoon of Nov. 20, and on Dec. 4 the Society will meet at the same place for a discussion of the plays presented.

THE STOCK COMPANIES.

Lillian Andrews resigned from the Imperial Stock in Providence because it became a twice-a-day house and has joined the Empire Theatre Stock in Columbus, Ohio. She played Mrs. O'Donnell Dulcet in The Cherry Pickers Nov. 7.

Little Fay Wallace is playing Simplicity Johnson in Lovers' Lane with success at the Belasco Theatre, Los Angeles. She assumed the difficult part at twenty-four hours' notice.

Frederick Belasco has gone to Los Angeles to personally stage an elaborate production of the picturesque Chinese play, The First Born. It will be done at the new Belasco Theatre. Juliet Crosby will shortly make her first appearance there as the heroine of The Girl I Left Behind Me.

Mortimer Snow is in town this week engaging people for his permanent company at the Lyceum Theatre, in Troy, N. Y. This is the twenty-eighth consecutive week of Mr. Snow's management in that city, an exception in local annals.

Lisle Leigh, the leading woman of the Albee Stock company at Keith's Theatre, in Pawtucket, R. I., has added greatly to her popularity in that town during the present season by her impersonations of Lady Isabel in East Lynne, Mrs. Seabrooke in Captain Swift, and Nellie Mason in The Belle of Richmond.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Agnes Caine Brown, to replace Flora Zabelle in The Yankee Consul. Lilly Brink will succeed Lolita Tavara.

Edith Blair, as prima donna of Sargeant Kitty, which will soon begin a tour.

George Fawcett, by Wagenhals and Kemper for the role of Raphael Friedlander in The Kreutzer Sonata, Blanche Walsh's new play.

May Robson, by Hamlin, Mitchell and Fields for one of the leading roles in the new Herbert-Macdonough musical play It Happened in Nordland, with which the new Fields Theatre will be opened.

Ernard Stuart, for Navy in The Black Mask.

Gertrude Bell, by Fred Zimmerman, Jr., to originate the character part of Madame Hyacinthe in Cupid and Company, which plays in Toronto this week.

THIS WEEK'S ATTRACTIONS.

LAST WEEK'S BILLS.

PASTOR'S.—Reno and Richards were the headliners and scored an unqualified hit in their absurdly amusing acrobatic act. James E. Rome and Marguerite Ferguson made their reappearance after a long absence and were cordially welcomed and their efforts were received with loud applause. William Cahill's Irish wit and his droll method of telling stories made him a favorite from the start. He has added some new ones to his already excellent string. Martini and Maxmillian with their funny burlesque magic, and Madge Fox with her flip-flaps, did exceedingly well. Other pleasing turns were given by Lavine and Leonard, Delphino and Delmors, the Fraser Trio, Kennedy and James, Golden and Hughes, Hunter and Mooney, and Max Wilson. New views were shown on the vitagraph.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE.—Claude Gillingwater was the chief attraction, presenting The Wrong Man, which made an unqualified hit. Mr. Gillingwater portrays a teacher of acting who visits a young married woman with a view to coaching her in a part. Her mistakes and his corrections form the basis of a series of side-splitting situations. The return of the woman's husband brings the curtain down on a very funny scene. The skit was cleverly played by Mr. Gillingwater, who was assisted by Nina Lyn, Carlyn Strelitz, and Louis M. Mortelle. The Nichols Sisters were very well liked and had to respond to several encores. Frank Gardner and Lottie Vincent, Mr. and Mrs. Allison in Minnie from Minnesota, and Press Eldridge also won great favor. The bill also included Marcel's Pictures, Vera King, who is cool, calm, collected and quite entertaining; H. V. Fitzgerald, Cunningham and Lord, Harper, Desmond and V. Bailey, the Marinellas, Kennedy and Quatrelli, and the biograph.

PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET.—Edward Harrigan made his reappearance in vaudeville in a new sketch written by himself called Darcy McGlone, Author. Mr. Harrigan impersonated a writer of vaudeville sketches, and the part gives him a chance to get off some of those wise and witty remarks for which he is famous. The plot of his new sketch is immaterial. It concerns a marriage that has been arranged between two young people who have never seen each other. The girl conspires with McGlone to impersonate her father, and together they try to disgust the young man, who sees through their scheme and secures the girl after all. Mr. Harrigan played with his accustomed skill and was ably assisted by Alice Braham and Robert Fitzgerald. The welcome accorded Mr. Harrigan was cordial in the extreme. John C. Rice and Sally Cohen were seen in a sketch called All the World Loves a Lover, written by Brandon Hurst. It is one of the best things of the kind seen here in a very long time, and is legitimately and thoroughly amusing from beginning to end. It is a story of a youth who is engaged to marry an unknown, in order to carry out the provisions of a will. He is expecting a visit from a chorus girl, and when his fiance walks in he mistakes her for the frail damsel, and acts accordingly. The many misunderstandings help to make a delightful little plot, and the ending, in which the true state of affairs is disclosed, is very happily managed. Mr. Rice was debonair and easy and made a distinct hit. Miss Cohen was equally good and together they scored a complete success. Clayton Kennedy and Mattie Rooney presented for the first time here a new act called The Happy Medium, which is better than anything they have ever done heretofore. The scene is laid in the office of a medium who is visited by a girl who is anxious to consult the spirits. There is a lot of very amusing dialogue and business and several songs and dances, with some of Mr. Kennedy's pianoing introduced. The skit goes with much snap and both performers work hard and with excellent results. Miss Rooney's new dresses are "dreams" and must have cost a great deal of money. A special setting was used that helped materially in making the sketch a hit. The Six Reed Birds won any number of encores for their excellent songs and dances introduced in Dave Reed's comedietta, Dodging the Dodgers. The acrobatic work of the Gasch Sisters, Loney Haskell's jokes, and the gymnastics of Clara Ballerini scored heavily. Dick Temple, the clever English comedian; McGrath Brothers, the Hollands, Snort and Edwards, Castle and Collins, Till's marionettes, the Healys, and the motion pictures, were also in the programme.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE.—The Henrietta, with Edwin Arden in Stuart Robson's old part of Bertie the Lamb, drew overflowing houses last week. Douglas Flint scored as Nicholas Van Alstyne, Isabelle Evesson as Mrs. Opdyke, Gertrude Berkley as Lady Mary Trelawney, and H. Dudley Hawley as Lord Trelawney, were prominent in a good cast. The feature of the vaudeville programme was a revival of The Queen's Fan, with Oriska Worden, Adele Archer, and Jessaline Child, who sang and acted their roles very cleverly. Bedini and Arthur won many laughs with their comedy juggling. Wolf and Milton, Lillian Ashley, Johnnie Hoey, Gilbert and Burt, Castellat and Hall, and the motion pictures also pleased.

PROCTOR'S FIFTY-EIGHTH STREET.—Edward Harrigan was the principal drawing card. He played also at the Twenty-third Street, and his performance is reviewed elsewhere. Henri French's marvelous feats caused much favorable comment, and the jests and wisely witty remarks of the only James Thornton found a ready response. Greene and Werner in Babes in the Jungle, and J. Royer West and Ida Van Siclen in their musical act went splendidly. Collins and Hart, Irene La Tour and her dog, Singer's monkeys and the motion pictures were also on hand. Dramatic attractions will be seen here once more, beginning this week, when The Heart of Maryland is the attraction.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA.—The entertainment opened with some remarkably fine jumping feats by Le Page, who deserved a much better place on the bill. His feat of jumping lightly on an apple placed on a sharp knife in such a way as not to cut it in half until he had touched it lightly with his feet several times in making his jumps is really remarkable. Another jump, in which he brushes his assistant's nose with his slippers while making his flight through the air, is one that few would be able to duplicate. He was followed by Cartmell and Harris, who did a very neat singing and dancing turn. Professor Aliene exhibited a trained ape called "Peter the Great," that he put through a series of tricks that showed much severe training. The fear of the whip shown by the ape, however, detracted somewhat from the attractiveness of the performance. Midgely and Carlisle in their diverting sketch, After School, paved the way agreeably for the appearance of Della Fox, who was the headliner. Miss Fox sang three songs, the last being "A Pretty Girl," from Wang, which recalled memories of the days of long ago. Miss Fox is not as "cute" as she used to be, having grown a little too stout for the boy's clothes that were formerly so becoming. The Florenz Troupe, enlarged to twelve people, presented an acrobatic act that includes several remarkably good tricks. One of the boys was particularly clever and did a triple somersault with much ease and grace. One of the most pleasing features of the programe was the turn of the Sisters Meredith. They opened with "The Sweetest Girl in Dixie," dressed in the quaint costumes of '61, in which they looked very attractive. A quick change brought them out in Parisian gowns of the latest fashion, and the dresses made their second song, "Teasing," go even better than usual. For their third song they wore Indian costumes and used a special setting for the proper presentation of Frank Keeney's very catchy song, "Towanda." They discarded the Indian dresses for very becoming short frocks, in which to bow to the enthusiastic applause. Klein, Ott Brothers and Nicholson's bright musical act was followed by Frank Bush, the inimitable story-teller, who gave the audience a pleasant surprise by springing an almost entirely new group of stories, which hit the bull's-eye of popular favor. There is an expression that Mr. Bush is very fond of using and he would do well to drop it, as it does not help in the least and rather mars an otherwise excellent act. Pewitt, the Mysterious Face, and the vitagraph views wound up a pleasing programme.

PROCTOR'S 125TH STREET.—Hearts Aflame, by Genevieve Haines, pleased the patrons immensely and the attendance was unusually large. William Ingersoll made his last appearance as leading man of the company in the part of Paul Charters, and judging by the applause he received the audiences were very sorry that he has made up his mind to enter the vaudeville field. If he should at any future time return to the company he will be sure of a hearty welcome, as he has established himself thoroughly in the favor of the theatregoers of Harlem. Beatrice Morgan as Mrs. Harmony was well fitted with a congenial part and was particularly good in the stronger scenes. Excellent work was also done by Arthur Buchannan as Harry Harmony, Lilla Vane as Alison Deyo, Mathilde Deshon as Mrs. Ashton, Alice Chandler as La Caprice, and Bessie Barriscale as Gladys. George Wilson headed an olio including Gracey and Burnett, the Maxsmith Duo, Barto and Lafferty, and the motion pictures.

HURTIG AND SEAMON'S.—Gracie Emmett and company, after a tour of the world, were seen once again in Charles Horwitz's very amusing sketch, Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband. Miss Emmett was cordially welcomed and kept the house in roars with her very clever impersonation of the Irishwoman who makes a second matrimonial venture. The Quigley Brothers caused some of the heartiest laughter heard here this season, in their original specialty, The Congressman-at-Large, which contains some of the brightest lines ever uttered from the vaudeville stage. The Smedley Sketch Club captivated the hearts of the women especially, and their playlet won instant favor. The children are very clever and fully deserve the success they have achieved. Rastus and Banks came in for their full share of approval. The bill also included Dan McAvoy and his girls, Caron and Herbert, Roberty Troupe, Anna Kenwick, and the pictures.

CIRCLE.—The Imperial Japanese Guards proved good drawing cards and the houses were exceptionally large. Gustave Kerker's Very Grand Opera company, with J. K. Murray, Clara Lane, Hilliard Campbell, and Leon Parmlee in the leading roles, scored a hit. Dolan and Lenharr were immensely amusing in A High Toned Burglar. Violet Dale, the dainty and clever comedienne, presented very accurate imitations of Grace Cameron, Lulu Glaser, Fay Templeton, Anna Held, and Mrs. Carter, finishing with a smart little dance, done with a grace and charm that were irresistible. Miss Dale's imitation of Lulu Glaser was remarkably good, and the others are worthy of great praise. She was recalled again and again and had to do her dance twice before she was allowed to make way for the next number. Herbert's very clever dogs, Mons. Albany, a new fantasist; Rice and Prevost, Charles F. Seamon in his new monologue act; Lew Sully, brisk and lively as ever; Major Sisters, and the vitagraph all won applause.

YORKVILLE.—Robert Hilliard, assisted by Edwin Holland and June Pelton, presented No. 973 with great success. Helena Frederick scored an unusual success with her finely rendered songs and was warmly encored. Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barry made a big laughing hit in A Skin Game. George W. Day's comments on current events, together with his budget of original songs, brought down the house. Rice and Prevost scored their usual hit in their extremely funny acrobatic specialty. The Three Westons, Cartmell and Harris, Spaulding, and the moving pictures completed the bill.

The Burlesque Houses.

DEWEY.—Fulton's Jolly Grass Widows drew a series of large and well pleased audiences and the efforts of Gruet and Gruet, Mullen and Corelli, Carleton and Terre, and Gordon and the Perrin Sisters met with approval. The burlesques were The Matrimonial Club and In the Merry Month of June. This week Dainty Duchess.

GOTHAM.—The Blue Ribbon Girls repeated the success they have made at other houses in this city, and the audiences were of a most satisfactory character. This week Robie's Knickerbockers.

OLYMPIC.—The stock burlesque company, under the direction of John Grieves, continued to please the patrons of this house. A burlesque called The Maid of the Bronx, and an olio including Arthur Yule, Carr and Lloyd, Barrington and and Martelle, Morris and Bowen and Keene met with approval. This week the stock company appears in a new burlesque.

LONDON.—The Moonlight Maids, with a bright olio, proved a good drawing card. This week Gay Masqueraders.

MINER'S BOWERY.—The Vanity Fair Burlesquers, with Imhoff, Conn and Corinne, Henry and Hoon and others, pleased. This week Utopians.

MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE.—Robie's Knickerbockers enjoyed a week of big business, and the excellent entertainment offered won great favor. This week Harry Bryant's Extravaganza company.

ZANGWILL SUPERVISES REHEARSALS.

Israel Zangwill is looking after the rehearsals of his comedy, Six Persons, in Which Isabel Irving will shortly be seen at the Proctor theatres in this city. During his visit to New York the well-known author has become deeply interested in vaudeville as it is presented in America, and declares that it is a field worthy of serious attention. If Six Persons should prove a success we may look for other one-act plays from his pen, and there is no telling what great stars may be "induced" to appear in them. Vaudeville debuts by prominent players are becoming so common that they attract only passing notice. In vaudeville it is always a case of the "survival of the fittest," and the legitimate stars who have made genuine hits in vaudeville can easily be counted on the fingers of one hand. If greater care were used in the selection of a vehicle the percentage of failures would be greatly lessened.

TITLE CHOSEN FOR FIELDS BURLESQUE.

The title chosen for the burlesque by Glen MacDonough and Victor Herbert, which is to open the new Lew Fields Theatre, is It Happened in Nordland. Nordland, it seems, is a mythical country, and all sorts of strange things may happen as a matter of course. Work on the new theatre is being rapidly pushed by Oscar Hammerstein, who is building it, and it is expected that it will be ready for opening on Tuesday, Nov. 29. The company is hard at work rehearsing every day, and may open out of town for a few dress rehearsals before coming to New York.

WONDERLAND CONTRACT AWARDED.

Andrew J. Cobe, the promoter of Wonderland, a big amusement enterprise to be opened next Summer at Broadway and 218th Street, last week awarded the contract for construction to Wells Brothers Company, of this city. The contract involves an expenditure of about $1,500,000, which does not include the contract for the electrical illuminations, which is one of the largest single jobs in that line ever undertaken. Mr. Cobe expects that Wonderland will be ready to receive the public before May 1.

AUTO WRECKS DEWEY CANOPY.

A runaway automobile dashed through Fourteenth Street early on Friday morning last, and came to a sudden stop in front of the Dewey Theatre by colliding with one of the posts that support the heavy iron canopy over the sidewalk. Four men who were passing were caught under the canopy as it fell, and were more or less seriously injured. The canopy will have to be entirely rebuilt.

VAUDEVILLE IN LONDON.

MIRROR BUREAU,
LONDON, Oct. 29.

On entering the Palace a sad feeling came over one at the conspicuous absence of the late Charles Morton, and the great contrast of age in the present occupier of his favorite seat at the back of the foyer was also very pronounced. Mr. Butt has taken up the reins with Mr. Morton's excellent career as his example, and the directors, I feel assured, can have every confidence that the late manager's popularity will be indorsed by the present manager with an increased, if possible, vigor. The testimonial matinee for the benefit of Mrs. Morton will be held on Nov. 8, and already several celebrated artists of both the dramatic and vaudeville stages have offered their services, and it is to be under the patronage of some of the highest personages of the land, which all goes to show in what esteem the late Mr. Morton was held.

Newcomers to the bill at the Palace are Charles Galetti and his animals, and Mignonette Kokin. The former has a most entertaining set of monkeys, who exercise their imitative qualities to perfection, evoking much merriment. Mignonette proved herself a most attractive little woman, dainty and clever in her dancing specialty. She has a certain amount of magnetism which readily won over her audience. Malcolm Scott is also back to the Palace with an entirely new monologue, burlesqued from Hall Caine's The Christian, and he lived up to the big reputation he has already made. The Magic Kettle is in its last weeks and its success has been so unique that B. F. Taylor, its fluent introducer, has already formed three companies to tour the British Isles. Belle Davis and her pickaninnies are still a worthy item on the programme, which has a great drawing card in Mlle. de Dio, whose act I have already described as a marvel of picturesque ingenuity.

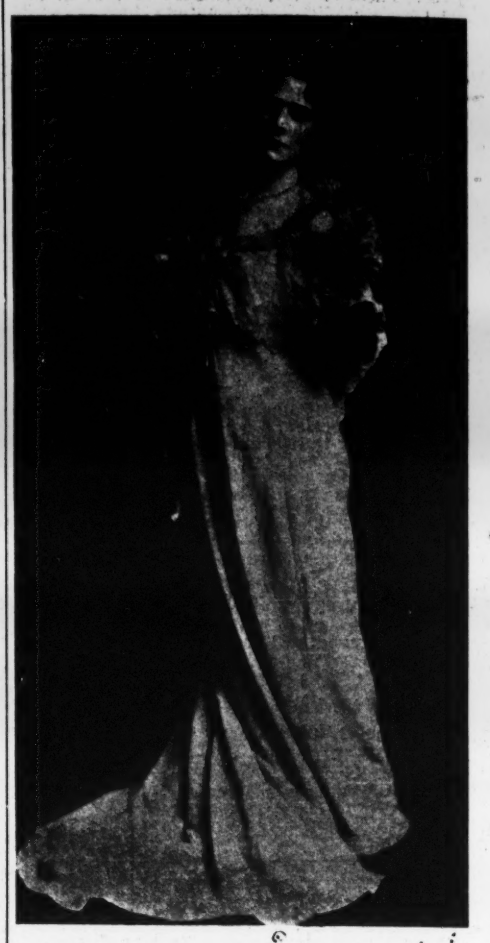
The Alhambra has added another big sensation to its already interesting bill in Dida, described as a "creation of a woman out of nothing." The "nothing" is a glass tank, which the operator fills with several buckets of water and which, when full, upon drawing a cloth over it and away, reveals a woman lying at the bottom. The effect is mystifying and rendered more so by his production of another of the charming sex out of the water in response to the audience's generous applause. I understand it is a Continental act and should prove interesting as a novelty. Violet Elliott is a young bass singer who has been receiving a great deal of notice lately from the press on account of her exceedingly deep compass. Her second song, "The Diver," showed her range to great advantage; in fact, several of her notes seemed to come from many fathoms deep. Miss Elliott is an Australian of prepossessing appearance.

Out at the Holloway Empire Winona Winter, assisted by William H. Banks, made her first appearance in London. She proved herself a very versatile little artist and quite a charming ventriloquist. In her song, "I Wants to Be the Leading Lady," she captured the house, being "fed" by Mr. Banks most satisfactorily. Being a well-known artist himself, one has to appreciate his stepping to one side to allow his clever daughter to show her abilities, an action that was well merited.

I understand that Post Mason is an American and naturally looked for great things. His scenery represents an Egyptian desert as a background to his song, "A Son of the Desert Am I," and therefore I was a little surprised to see him dressed as an Indian rajah. He put up an excellent appearance, which was successful in pulling him through. Millie Hylton, a sister of Letty Lind, is an attractive comedienne and sang "Navajo" prettily, though not quite with the finish which this song calls for. The rest of the bill was to the taste of the audience.

The Empire, New Cross, one of the most commodious houses on the Stoll Tour, has a special attraction in Mason and Keeler, and it goes without saying they made a big success. The Three Pantzer Brothers and Lalla Selbini scored individual hits. A clever little woman is Ella Retford, who seems to go in for American songs.

MADAME SLAPOFFSKI.



Above is a picture of Madame Slapoffski, the celebrated prima donna, who is now making a tour of the best vaudeville houses in the United States, and is everywhere duplicating the success that made her a popular idol in Australia, from which country she arrived a few months ago. Madame Slapoffski began her career under her maiden name of Frances Neilson, but upon her marriage took that of her husband. While the audiences at the vaudeville theatres have appreciated Mme. Slapoffski's efforts, that form of entertainment gives only a faint idea of her real talent, as she is capable of singing and acting the most trying roles in grand opera. This is her real forte, and it is to be hoped that some time in the near future she will have an opportunity to demonstrate her ability in this line, which is the real test of vocal talent. Mme. Slapoffski's voice is rich, clear and full, with a remarkable range. In the "Jewel Song," from Faust and the "Song of Thanksgiving," which she is using in her vaudeville work, her voice is heard to much advantage, and competent critics have praised it in unmeasured terms. Mme. Slapoffski will continue to play in vaudeville for the remainder of the season.

The London Hippodrome has added an interesting turn in Staley's transformation act to their bill. It is unique and well thought out, the transformation from a cooper's factory to a parlor setting being most effective and quick. They made an instantaneous hit.

The Onlaw Trio, a turn well known in America, dress their act well and have not only a strong personality but the two men possess remarkable strength in their jaws and support their woman partner on a wire in her various feats, the crowning one being her riding a bicycle on the wire. Zutka, the mysterious, G. H. Webster's enterprising act, is still figuring as a big mystery as ever, while Robertus and Wilfredo are capable ball manipulators, working with great precision. Siberia is in its last two weeks.

Norman J. Norman's company, playing In Dahomey, is doing excellent business. I saw them at the Coronet Theatre, and I was more than rewarded for my visit to that elegant suburban theatre. Harry Hockaday is a most able manager. Avery and Hart proved themselves most able substitutes for Williams and Walker, Hart especially resembling Williams in all his humorous methods. The whole company, with its chorus of sixty colored people, were very efficient, and the play went with a swing and snap which seemed to highly please the immense audience present.

Maude Courtney is at the London Pavilion this week and also Daisy Mayer, lately returned from the States, Hill and Whittaker, and Alice Pierce, all going toward forming a strong American bill.

Florence Nesbitt is in London and informs me she may yet enter the field of vaudeville in a sketch. What a charming addition she would make!

Heeley and Meeley, Sam Elton and Harry Elton sail next Wednesday on the Oceanic from Liverpool.

Al. Lawrence, McPhee and Hill, Swan and Bambard, and the Four Lukens arrived on the Oceanic, while Fiske and McDonough arrived on the Menominee, the latter opening their tour Nov. 7 at Bordesley.

M. B. Leavitt is in town, also Frank Gerth, manager of the Creatore Band.

The post cards from Klein, Ott Brothers and Nicholson are accumulating. They are booked for the Hippodrome for next July.

James Horan, who sailed for South Africa a few weeks ago, through some dispute in the billing with Lola Yberri, in which she raised an objection to his being billed as largely as herself, showed his independence by returning to London. He is now being taken in hand by Ashton's Royal Agency for select drawing-room entertaining, and he should succeed, for he is most versatile.

Many thanks to Frederick V. Bowers and Harry Corson Clarke for their various cards sent to THE MIRROR bureau.

Wyman, of Boston restaurant fame and well known to the profession, is opening a new American restaurant on the Strand. His venture should receive a great deal of support from visitors from the other side.

I am sorry to hear that Dundas Slater, the former manager of the Alhambra, has met with an accident, breaking his leg.

The Doherty Sisters leave this week for Budapest and Blanche Sloan for Hamburg.

LONDON, Nov. 5.

One of the best bills the Empire has produced for a long time was presented last Monday evening. The great attraction was the Four Lukens, whose arrival has been heralded for the last month. The foyer was filled with agents and Continental artists, who were desirous of seeing what America could produce in the way of gymnasts. From all reports they appeared to be greatly surprised, for they had looked for sensation and found more than they expected. When the Lukens commenced their act it was obvious to their audience that they were very daring, and with their unquestionable skill they instantaneously made a terrific hit. Some of their throws were appalling on account of the danger, but they landed through all the intense nervousness of the first-night with a success quite unprecedented. They will create a stir over here and make other acrobats look to their laurels. The Three Meers are back again on the bill, after a successful tour in the provinces, and still evoke

MORTIMER KAPHAN.

Mortimer Kaphan, who is making a success in vaudeville with his impersonations of Henry Irving in The Bells, Richard Mansfield as Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, Fagin in Oliver Twist, Brutus in Julius Cæsar and Spartacus in The Gladiator, making a complete change of costumes for each impersonation in twenty seconds. Manager Henderson, of the Nelida Theatre, Catskill, N. Y., says "Mr. Kaphan has one of the best acts in vaudeville to-day. His company, headed by himself, played my house Election Day, two performances, to capacity." Mr. Kaphan is also at the head of the Kaphan Theatrical Syndicate, New York, which is presenting this season the play Carmen.

much applause with their wire act. Charles T. Aldrich is also a return addition to the programe and a very welcome one. He has added to his old act a series of quick changes done on the stage during a momentary darkening of the lights. The effect is extraordinary on account of its rapidity, and the changes almost approach the incredible. From that Aldrich switches to his well known tramp act, and finishes with his amusing burlesque upon Ching Ling Foo. He received huge rounds of applause. Morris Cronin and troupe, who only recently finished an engagement at the Hippodrome, continued his success at the Empire, the adroitness of his assistants with the clubs and in their comedy giving the act a great send-off. As Risley acrobats the Julian Family of five males and one female lend an interesting Continental atmosphere to the bill. They work with a swing and grace that is most acceptable and well deserved the big reception they got. The Empire evidently finds it necessary to give their patrons some good whistling, and consequently stick to Tom Browne, who makes his usual hit. O'Neal and Torp, in their eccentric comedy act and the Delbosqs with their vaulting specialty are still retained. By special request, the "Milliner Duchess" ballet has been revived with all its original beautiful effects, giving Mlle. Genée every opportunity of showing her exceeding smartness. Although not quite so effective as the majority of Empire divertissements it was welcomed.

The untimely death of Dan Leno has caused great regret. He was only forty-three years of age and had quite an unusual career. The entire press and profession at large spared no efforts to express their unanimous sorrow, and I am sure every one who met him will join me in sending the deepest regrets to his bereaved family.

A new turn due at the London Hippodrome next Monday will be Georg Lettl, who is described as a wonder in weight lifting for an ordinarily built man "singularly deficient in muscular development."

Al. Lawrence is billed to appear at the Pavilion, Glasgow, on Monday, and should prove a welcome addition in his humorous monologue act.

The Tossing Austins, Cooke and Rothert, and the ever-popular Everhart are competing for honors at the Wintergarten, Berlin.

Malini, the card manipulator, is giving a special entertainment to-night at the Pavilion Concert Hall, Brighton. James Horan will be one of the entertainers.

Blanche Sloan, with her ring act, has caught on at the Hansa Theatre, Hamburg, while Bicknelle, the clay modeler, writes me from Copenhagen that he is making quite a model success in that city.

Kate Hardren, an American girl, is shortly to open in vaudeville here, so I understand.

The New Gothams and Stewart and FitzGibbons are due to arrive in London, as they sail for South Africa next Saturday.

W. C. Fields is creating a sensation in Paris at the Folies Bergére. The papers describe him as the cleverest and most humorous artist they have yet seen; in fact, mentioning him far above Cleo de Merode, who is such a big favorite in the gay city.

Herbert Miller, late leading man with The Span of Life, is in London on a vacation.

Reports are that Lizzie B. Raymond is making a big hit in South Africa. REVONOC.

POLI'S SPRINGFIELD HOUSE OPENED.

Poli's Theatre in Springfield, Mass., was opened last week, and every indication points to the fact that this enterprising manager has added another success to his already long list. He has devoted himself to the development of vaudeville in New England, and has not made a failure of any enterprise of which he has taken hold. There was a large and fashionable audience at the Springfield opening, and Mr. Poli was complimented on the good taste shown in the decoration and furnishing of his new house.

AN INTERESTING COMPLICATION.

Montreal is at present the scene of a complication that has come up in the burlesque field, and the outcome is awaited with much interest. The Sparrow Amusement Company is the sponsor of a new company organized to conduct music halls in Boston, Providence, Montreal, and other cities. The Theatre Francais is the Montreal house, and the dates held for the burlesque companies in the "wheel" have been transferred to the Royal, which has been rebuilt. The members of the "wheel" combination objected to the scheme formed by the Sparrow Company, and threatened to cancel the Montreal dates. The lawyers for the Sparrow Company have notified the various managers of the traveling companies that they will be held to the letter of their contracts. Reports from Montreal indicate that the affair will be amicably adjusted, and the result will probably be that the various companies will play at the Royal instead of the Francais.

GEORGE FULLER GOLDEN HOME AGAIN.

George Fuller Golden arrived in New York on the Lucania on Saturday, and was met at the pier by a number of old friends, who gave him a most enthusiastic welcome. Mr. Golden was looking remarkably well, and seemed to be delighted at being once more on his native soil. He went to London about twenty months ago, and, opening at the Palace, enjoyed a run there of almost one solid year. His popularity was unbounded and he trebled his income by appearing at private entertainments given by the first families of England. He will play at Hammerstein's shortly, and will fill other engagements until it is time for him to start for Australia, where he is booked for a six months' engagement, beginning March 20. After that he will go to South Africa, and then return to England, where he is booked for three years, beginning in October, 1905.

VAUDEVILLE IN BROOKLYN.

Frederick Bond in My Awful Dad headlined the Orpheum bill and scored a big laughing hit. The sketch is going better than ever, notwithstanding its great familiarity. He was assisted by Ed. Hardcastle in some capital work, Thomas Weadock and Georgie Benton. Bert Howard and Leona Bland again repeated their hit of last season in a Strange Boy. Howard is always improving his piano work and it went with a will last week. Miss Bland's new gowns were creations and opened many an envious eye in the audience. Germinal, a newcomer in vaudeville, reported direct from the Grand Opera House, Paris, sang a few songs in a manner that brought down the house. He has a voice of wonderful quality and will be always sure of a big welcome on his return dates.

Stuart Barnes one of our foremost monologue artists, offered some talk that was almost entirely new. It is needless to say that it scored heavily, his success is always assured. A few new songs were rendered that brought back the days when he was famous for that line of work and met with a hearty appreciation. The Great Therese offered a genuine comedy turn, the idea of which was a burlesque on hypnotism. It is one of the best things we have seen. Mary Dupont, as dainty as ever, scored a delightful hit in a little playlet entitled, A Leap Year Leap. She was assisted by Willard Hutchinson. The Martin Brothers proved their genuine worth on the xylophone and the Moulier Sisters did some sensational horizontal bar work. Grimwood's Monkey Circus pleased, but he should be a bit more careful how he treats his animals before his audience. The Lost Child turned out to be quite a laughing hit on the Vitagraph. This week Josef Yarrick and the Magic Kettle, S. Miller Kent, Gustave Kerker's "Very Grand" Opera Co., Herbert's Dogs, Lew Sully, Charles F. Semon, and Albany.

At Watson's Cosey Corner the Three Westons, Smith and Baker, Allen and Delmain, Drummond Quartette, George H. Thomas and Egeberg, the wrestler. The burlesque will be developed along the usual happy lines.

Keeney's offering includes May Robson, Rastus and Banks, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Thorne, Green and Milliken, Four Webbs, Laura Comstock, Campbell and Canfield and Chinese Johnny Williams.

This week at Hyde and Behman's The Four Mortons head the bill. Jewell's Mannikins, Robert Henry Hodge and Company, Charles Ernest, Waterbury Brothers and Tenny, Marvelous Merrills, Murphy and Francis and the Italian Trio complete the bill. Last week Henry Dixey carried off the honors of a bill which included Jewell's Mannikins in a wonderful little "show" of their own and far better than anything ever seen in that line before; Bellman and Moore in a exceptionally clever "variety" bit; Bailey and Madison as eccentric and happy as ever; Elmer Tenley in a capital monologue; Rosa Nayon's Birds pleased, as did John and Bertha Gleeson and Fred Houlihan in a dancing act par excellence, Sandor Trio and Bruce and Daigneau.

GEORGE TERWILLIGER.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

Milton and Long are presenting their musical comedietta, "The Constable," with George Hall's A Ragged Hero co.

Charles E. Royal is pleasing the people of the West with a monologue.

Frank Fogarty, Hal Clemens, Fred Ray, J. Francis Dooley and John S. Rooney entertained the members of Marshall Lodge, U. D. F. and A. M., at a banquet given at Mouquin's on Nov. 10.

The Hebrew vaudeville performers, who appear at the People's Music Hall, 104 and 106 Bowery, went on strike last week on account of the alleged employment by the manager of non-union actors.

May Isabel Fisk will make her formal debut in vaudeville at Proctor's Twenty-third Street and Fifth Avenue Theatres, on Nov. 28, presenting two original monologues. Miss Fisk had a trial some weeks ago at a matinee at Proctor's and made an excellent impression.

The College Widow will be the first play to be burlesqued at Weber's Music Hall. The new burlesque will be used as the second part of Higgledy-Piggledy, which will be condensed into one act.

Charles Leonard Fletcher has postponed his return to England, owing to the success in this country of his new act, An Evening With Charles Dickens and Other Great Novelists. He is now playing the Kohl and Castle Circuit with the Orpheum Circuit to follow. Mr. Fletcher returns to England late in March, opening at the Tivoli, London, Easter week and he has bookings extending into 1907. He states that Western audiences are enthusiastic over his impersonations of the Dickens characters.

Edward Castano, of The Dancing Castanos, informs THE MIRROR that his sister, Helena M. Castano, who has been for the past eight weeks in Roosevelt Hospital with typhoid fever, is now on the road to recovery and it is hoped that she will be able to return to her home in about four weeks. She will not resume work until next season.

Maude Raymond is seriously ill with appendicitis at her residence in this city.

Charles F. Ernest was unable to finish out his week in Pittsburgh on account of an attack of bilious fever. He is still quite ill but expects to resume work in a few days.

Grace Filkins, who retired from the stage some years ago, will return soon and make her reappearance in a vaudeville sketch.

Claude Gillingwater's sketch, The Wrong Man, was seen at Keith's on Friday evening last by a box party including Mrs. Leslie Carter and several of her friends. Mr. Gillingwater was formerly a member of Mrs. Carter's co., and will rejoin her as soon as she resumes playing.

It is whispered that Blanch Chapman, who made a pronounced hit in Bird Center, contemplates doing a musical sketch in vaudeville from the plan of a well-known author, entitled, Rival Prima Donnas.

Sig. Sautelle has sold his circus to J. T. McCaddon, brother-in-law of James A. Bailey. It is said that Mr. McCaddon intends to take the circus to Paris, with a view to establishing it there as a permanent attraction.

Manning and Lane opened with the J. B. Spooner Amusement co. on Oct. 17 in Whoop-De-Doo, playing Weber and Fields' parts.

Jessie Couthoui has been quite ill during the past three weeks with muscular rheumatism, at her home, 6532 Harvard avenue, Chicago, and though still unable to leave her room, she is now improving and hopes soon to be entirely well. Miss Couthoui is having a four-color three-sheet made by the Buffalo Courier Co., for her big new act, Eleven-Forty, P. M.

Chrystal Herne, Julia Herne and Claire Kulp have formed a partnership for the purpose of supplying the vaudeville theatres with special attractions. Julia Herne is the author of the playlet, Between the acts, in which Chrystal Herne is making her vaudeville debut this week at Keith's Union Square, and Miss Kulp is the business manager of the firm. The combined efforts of the three enterprising young women have resulted in a good opening and the promise of better things to come, in case their first venture is successful.

Dan J. Harrington has just closed successful engagements at Pastor's; Chase's Washington; Orpheum, Utica; Empire, Hoboken, and is at Proctor's, Newark, this week. He has a Proctor's 125th street and Albany, and Keeney's, Brooklyn, to play. He has played Sunday concerts at the American, Metropolis, Star and Grand Opera House this season, with others to follow.

Yankee Jim, a melodrama in one act, touching on the war in the East, written by Finley Fauley, was tried at Proctor's Fifth Avenue on Sunday evening last. Benjamin Bradbury, Roydon Keyth and Florence Clements were in the cast. The play was staged under the direction of the author.

Mr. and Mrs. William Robyns are showing their new sketch, Shore Folks, for which they use a special setting, at the Empire Theatre, Hoboken, this week.

VAUDEVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Kitty Cheatham-Thompson makes her vaudeville debut at the Chicago Opera House this week. Cressy and Dayne are on the bill with a new sketch, also the Empire Comedy Four, Campbell and Johnson, Lavender and Thomson, Lynn Welcher, Ziska and King, Three Mitchells, Clara Hess, Roland Sargent and co., Mlle. Excelia, Mexias and Frank Emerson.==Olympic: White and Stuart, Kitamura Japs, Rooney's Street Urchins, Howe and Scott, Zelma Rawlston, Treloar and Tempest, Billy Carter, Mitchell and Love, Curtis and Adams, Vontello and Nina, Walter Daniels, Fred and Annie Pelot, Forrest and Forrest, and Downey and Willard.==Haymarket: McIntyre and Heath, Spessardy's bears, Grace Palotta and Maids, Urbani and Son, Frank and Jen Latona, Clarice Vance, Smirl and Kessner, Probst, Herbert Deveau, Axtell and Early, and Dorothy Kenton.==Cleveland's: Three Keatons, Colby and Way, Rio Brothers, James J. Rehan, Carmen Sisters, Papinta, Jules and Ella Garrison, and Paul Spadoni, Sadie Martinot, Emmett Devoy and co., Smith and Cook, Lucy Clarke, Yankee Comedy Four, Brothers Melvin, Finley and Burke, Zazell and Vernon, Reiff Brothers, and Norris and Brown.==Trocadero: Kentucky Belles, Sam Jack's Prize Beauties.==Folly: Leavitt's Rentz-Santley co.==Items: The Great Lafayette captured the crowd at the C. O. H. with his mystifying tricks.—The opening week of the Olympic, with one of the best bills ever seen here, was a succession of big houses. O. L. COLBURN.

BOSTON, MASS.—So thoroughly interesting were the tests with liquid air made at Keith's last week that the feature has been continued for one more week. The other features are Fred Hallen and Mollie Fuller, Will H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols in From Zaza to Uncle Tom; Christmas on the Island, Powell's Marionettes, Raymond and Caverly, Charles Kenna, Wilton Brothers, James F. MacDonald, the Brittons, Herbert Brooks, the Marinellas, Earl and Wilson, Ada Arnoldson, and the biograph.==Jessie Millward leads the bill at Boston Music Hall this week (her local vaudeville debut). Others are Edna Aug, Simon and Gardner, Frederick Brothers and Burns, the Redcay-Duffin Troupe, Therese, Carson and Willard, Brown, Harris and Brown, and the kinetograph.==With the Howard Athenaeum Burlesque co. are the Sandow Trio, Searl and Violet Allen, Irene La Tour, Wood and Ray, La Vine and Waltone, Carter and Bluford, Golden and Hughes, Lottie West-Symonds, Pierce and Maizee, Fields and Hanson, Kennedy and Hayes, Ritchie and Francis, Madge Anderson, and Zanfretta and Mansfield.==A complete change of bill is made at the Columbia Music Hall this week, with the exception of Mlle. Adgie and her lions. The burlesque co. appears in Tiddle Dee Winks, and the vaudeville acts are Boyce and Beesen, the Bohemian Musical Troupe, Mae Taylor, Van Auken and Rosen, and the Burdock Sisters.==Reilly and Wood's Burlesquers are at the Palace, with the Century Comedy Four, Dora Pelletier, Misses Adams and Swinburn, Orth and Fern, Keeler and Watson, and Pat Reilly.==With the New York Stars at the Lyceum this week are Roberts, Hayes and Roberts, the Brennans, Three Lelliotts, C. B. Watson, and Alice Porter.==The engagements at Austin and Stone's are Lillian Weathers, the Melburns, Grace Gordon, Florella, Elizabeth Miller, Jack Irwin, Fred Styles, McGrevy and Marshall, the Gibney Sisters, Carroll and Wilson, the De Morella Trio, Rochefort, and May and Blanche. JAY BENTON.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Keith's New Theatre week 14-19 presents Harry Gilfoil, Emmett Corrigan and co., Fadette Orchestra, Press Eldridge, Callahan and Mack, Gardner and Vincent, Nichols Sisters, Laura Millard, Cain and De Forrest, Edwin Nicander, Mr. and Mrs. Allison, Harper, Desmond and Bailey, Kennedy and Quatrelli, Cunningham and Lord, the Latells, and the biograph. This handsome house, with its immense seating capacity, is crowded nightly.==Gilmore's Auditorium, with its name changed to the Casino, has been leased to Elies, Koenig and Lederer and opened 14 with Rice's Merry Shop Girls, for a preliminary season, to be followed by George W. Lederer's Musical Stock co. as a permanent attraction.==At the Trocadero Waldron's Trocadero Burlesquers hold forth. Pleasing bill to big business.==The Lyceum has Rice and Barton's Big Gayety co. Jolly Grass Widows 21.==Bon Ton (late Star) is doing well with continuous vaudeville attractions, 14-19: Apollo Lady Orchestra, Star Juvenile Minstrels, Mr. and Mrs. Gottlob, the Barkers, Elite Trio, Adams and Edwards, Empire Comedy Four, Bell Myers, Three Nanettes, Lottie West Symonds, Josh Hart, Caldwell Sisters, Marvelous Cristo, Reynolds and Bowers.==Empire (Frankford) week 14 has Prentice Trio, Ed K. Cassidy, Bending Bonds, Bryant and Saville, and Edith Franers.==Arch Street Museum attractions are Irene Vaughn, Epps and Loretta, Charles Blake, the Taneans, Tom Bissett, Proctor and Hunt, and Cupid Reed. S. FERNBERGER.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Keith's (Charles Lovenberg, res. mgr.): The bill 7-12 was excellent and business was large. One of the chief features of the week was the act by Powell's Marionettes. James J. Morton, Charles Kenna, and Fred Hallen and Mollie Fuller in Election Bets were the other topliners. Pierce and Maizee appeared in a very pretty singing and dancing act, introducing some beautiful costumes and scored a substantial hit. Le Roy and Clayton were well received, as were also the Four Rianos, Laura Millard, Newell and Niblo, the Brittons, Carlotta Delmar, the Maginleys and May Evans, 14-19: Mabel McKinley, Prosper Troupe, Girda and Gardner, Nora Bayes, Ed Raymond, Lotta Gladstone, Charley Case, the Sa Vans, Al. H. Burton, Scott and Johnson, the Valdings, Powers and Freed, St. John and Le Fevre, and biograph.==Westminster (George H. Batcheller, mgr.): Reilly and Woods' co. gave one of the best entertainments of the season to large houses 7-12. The burlesques were good and the olio, headed by the Humad Arab Troupe, was excellent. World Beaters 14-19.==Park Music Hall (Spitz, Nathanson and Wendelschaefer, mgrs.): The entertainment 7-12 was far ahead of that which opened the house a week ago and business was better. The burlesque, The Japskys, contained very pretty music and it was well sung by a good looking and efficient chorus. A strong olio was furnished by Bennett and Rich, Libby Blondell, Three Polos, Lorraine Sisters, World's Trio, and Majestic Musical Four. Fiddle-Dee-Dee 14-19. HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The Orpheum presented a bill of very entertaining quality week 6-12 and pleased the usual large audiences. Marguerita Sylvia was the topliner, and her act, the garden scene from Faust, scored a decided hit. The Zancigs in a mental telepathy test caused much wonder. Clement De Lion, a clever billiard ball palmist, and Burton and Brooks were also especially well received. Knight Brothers and Miss Sawtelle, Trovollo, and Lawson and Namon also shared in the applause. For 13-19: Williams and Tucker, Melrose Troupe, Vernon, Ford Sisters, Robert Nome, James and Bonnie Farley, and Phyllis Allen.==Yale's bill week 6-12 was of only average merit. Van Quett, a contortionist, and Leonhardt, a comedy juggler, were the favorites. Ward and Lester, Comees Duo, and the Musical Lesters also played. Business good.==The Fay Foster co. was the Century attraction 6-12, to fair business. The Royal Zouave Girls were the favorites in the olio. City Sports 13-19. D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Grand (Harry Davis, mgr.): This week the splendid bill is as follows: Marion Ballou, at one time ingenue of Mr. Davis' Stock co., and one of its most popular members, in an entertaining musical monologue; Staley and Birbeck, Willy Zimmerman, Yorke and Adams, Ward and Curran, Charles Hera, Trask and Gladden, Foster's dog, Dora Pellitier, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane, Damm Brothers, Louise Brehany, Irving Jones, Orletta and Taylor, and the kinetograph. Next week William Ingersoll and Eva Taylor make their vaudeville debut in a one-act comedy called Imaginary Madness.==Star (Keystone Amusement Co.): Still doing a good business at 10 cents a head out in the mill district, with its "vest pocket" vaudeville. Four acts, with moving pictures, is the weekly bill.==Academy (Harry Williams, Jr., mgr.): Harry Williams' Imperial Burlesquers this week. ALBERT S. L. HEWES.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Olive May and J. W. Albaugh are the Columbia headliners 14-20. There are also Howard and Emerson, Allen Curtis and co., Nelson Farnum Troupe, Rooney and Bent, Russell and Locke, Eleanor Falk, Lambert and Pierce, Wahlund and Tekla, Werden and Gladdish, Bennett Sisters, and the kinodrome. Capacity at every performance. Now that Music Hall is dark, the election over, and the Fair near an end, Manager Tate will be able to see more of his thousands of friends. The one real busy theatrical man in this town all Summer has been this same good fellow, Tate.==The Rose Hill co. is playing at the Standard. As a regular visitor no one is more welcome at Manager Butler's house than the Rose Hillians. The olio shines by the clever work of George Rice, one of the owners of the co. He is a deservedly popular comedian. J. A. NORTON.

DENVER, COL.—Business is always good at the Orpheum. The bill Oct. 31-5 included Three Ramoniers, very good acrobats; the Two Pucks, clever children; Carlisle's dogs and ponies; Johnson and Wells, a very good colored team; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in When Two Hearts are Won; Howe and Scott, and Boston Brothers. Week 7: Valerie Bergere and co., Felix and Barry, Borani and Nevaro, the Tobins, Tyce and Jermon, De Witt, Burns and Torrance, and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in a new play.==The three 10-cent houses—the Novelty, Crystal, and Lyric—are packed at every performance, and all of them give very good bills. MARY ALKIRE BELL.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Poli's (S. Z. Poli, mgr.; Louis Kilby, res. mgr.): The bill week 7 was of the usual merit and drew the customary large audiences. Hill and Sylvany Barrows, Lancaster co., Moore and Littlefield, Lutz Brothers, Cliff Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Shaw, and the electrograph scored.==Item: On the occasion of the opening of the new Poli Theatre in Springfield, the attaches of the Hartford house sent a big floral horseshoe. The guests on this occasion included Manager Splain, of Waterbury; Advertising Agent Speigel, of New Haven; Booking Agent Alonzo, of New York; Manager Kilby of the Hartford house and A. DUMONT.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Bon Ton (Thomas W. Dinkins, mgr.): The Trocadero Burlesque co. 7-12 to fine patronage. Performance gave satisfaction. Runaway Girls 14-16. Thoroughbreds 17-19. CHARLES N. PHELPS.

TORONTO, CAN.—Shea's (M. Shea, mgr.): Receipts were splendid 7-12. Herrmann the Great was the topliner and electrified his audiences as usual. Others on the programme were: Rosaire and Deretto, James J. MacDonald, Carmen Sisters, the Five Mowats, Duffy, Sawtelle and Duffy, Koin and Spender, Holcombe, Curtis and Webb, and kinetograph.==Star (J. W. Stair, mgr.): Splendid business 7-12 with the Bohemian Burlesquers, often to S. R. O. A good bill and well pleased audiences all week. STANLEY McKEOWN BROWN.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Orpheum (Clarence Drown, mgr.): The best things on the bill Oct. 31-6 were the motion pictures and Lewis McCord and co. in Her Last Rehearsal. Techow's cats have again made their appearance and their show is remarkable. Josie De Witt with her violin and her singing won any amount of applause. Sinon and Paris, the droll Greeks, do a lot of funny business, which greatly amuses. Hickey and Nelson, Julius Tannen, and Murphy and Willard fill up the balance. DON W. CARLTON.

NEWARK, N. J.—Proctor's: An excellent bill headed by Mabel McKinley drew large houses 7-12. Others who pleased were Sherman and De Forest, Frederick Brothers and Burns, Hale and Francis, Watermelon Trust, Waldorf and Mendez, the De Muths, and the pictures.==Waldmann's: Excellent business continues at this house. The Bowery Burlesquers were the attraction 7-12. Among the specialties are Taylor Trio, Watson and Barnett, Ben Jansen, Davenport Brothers, De Arcos, and Belle Veola. Moonlight Maids 14-19. FREDERIC T. MARSH.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The bill at Chase's week 14-19 presents Pewitt, Claude Gillingwater and co., Chassino, McMahon's Minstrel Maids, Melani Trio, Signor Germinal, Conture and Gillette, and the vitagraph. Next week the headliners comprise Basque Quartette, Holcombe, Curtis and Webb, Stuart Barnes, and others.==Scribner's Morning Glories for the same period are at Kernan's Lyceum. In the co. are Clarence Wilbur, James Marcus, Louis Hartman, and Nat Bernard. Tiger Lillies 21. JOHN T. WARDE.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The bill at the Maryland 14-19 includes Rose Stahl and co., Quigley Brothers, Snyder and Buckley, Collins and Hart, Duffy, Sawtelle and Duffy, the Zarnes, Marcel's bas reliefs, and the biograph.==Ross and Fenton are at the Auditorium, where they appear in Whirly-Whirly. They are supported by an imposing array of comedians, singers and dancers. The Beauty Doctor will follow.==The Tiger Lillies co. is at the Monumental. HAROLD RUTLEDGE.

CINCINNATI, O.—Mary Shaw, supported by Harold Cahill, was the leader of the Columbia bill 6-12 in the laughable play, The Silent System. Caron and Farnum had a great acrobatic act, and the Four Madcaps offered a splendid turn. Others were Carlin and Otto, Jack Gardner in a good monologue, Kine and Gotthold, Sabel Johnson, and Gillett's dogs.==The Merry Maidens were at People's 6-12 to full houses, and gave an excellent performance. H. A. SUTTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—At the Orpheum Oct. 30-6: Watson, Hutchings, Edwards and co., Misses Delmore, Halley and Meahan, Petching Brothers, Sullivan and Pasquelena, Harvey Comedy co. American School of PLAYWRITING (FOURTH YEAR.)

Conducted by W. T. PRICE AND ASSOCIATES.

"But to write and read comes by NATURE."—DOGBERRY, IN "MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING." Are you a Dogberry? Playwriting is an ART and has to be learned; if you do not know the Art, you are wasting time in writing in competition with those who DO KNOW. It takes ten or twenty years to learn untaught. Are your years worth nothing? Taught by a specially devised system of written exercises BY MAIL. No book ever written on the Drama is more than an introduction to the study as pursued in a practical way in this school. Monthly payments. If the study as here pursued does not fascinate you, you may drop out at any time. You may begin at any time. Special rates to clubs of two or three, bringing the study within the reach of those who cannot bear the slight expense singly. All plays reaching a certain standard are printed, without outlay by the student, for purposes of better copyright, submission to managers, and the record of the school. All such PRINTED plays, if not disposed of to managers, for whom the school primarily exists, will eventually be produced by the school, as it matures and gets on that footing which it will inevitably attain. Explanatory circular. Address
